Strongly methods-based in its approach, the text also imparts the how-to of teaching with a plethora of examples as to what is appropriate to teach children ages three to six years of age.

Resources in Education, 2000. Developmentally Appropriate Practice Carol Gestwicki, 1995. The increasing numbers of young children cared for by others beyond family has naturally led to questions about the most helpful practices to nurture their development. Now educators, care givers, administrators, and parents can get the direction they need. Practical and comprehensive, this book offers clear discussions on the specifics of what is and is not developmentally appropriate for children from birth through age 8. Developmentally Appropriate Teaching in Early Childhood Dominic F. Gullo, 1992. The guiding principles of developmentally appropriate early childhood education are examined along with pertinent research, concrete examples, and implications for practice. Chapter 1 provides a brief introduction to recent trends in early childhood education. Chapter 2 considers the principle of matching early childhood education practices to the ways children learn. Factors affecting children's development and the unique characteristics of young children's thinking are explored. Chapter 3 addresses the implementation of developmentally appropriate curricula in learning environments that are structured to encourage exploration and facilitate learning and development Characteristics of the environments and materials from which children process information construct knowledge and solve problems are examined The guiding principle considered in chapter 4 is that of viewing the age range of 5 to 8 years as a continuum of development rather than as a series of discrete grade levels Curricular and instructional strategies for dealing with the similarities and differences in this age span are discussed Chapter 5 urges educators to consider parent involvement as a critical element in the early childhood curriculum The benefits of parent involvement for children parents teachers and schools are described Chapter 6 delves into the relationship between evaluation the curriculum and the child arguing for the use of ongoing evaluation for decision making and curriculum development Finally chapter 7 offers a transactional approach to teaching in early childhood AC
