"Is there hope for the future? Yes, as David Boyd brilliantly demonstrates, because of the energy and commitment of people who know the problems and take action to solve them. And because of the power of the human brain for good when it is in harmony with the human heart."

The Environmental Dilemma, Optimism Or Despair? Lambert N. Wenner, 1997 For countless millenia humans extended their domain around the world gradually using more of nature s resources High death rates from famine disease and other perils restricted population growth Since 1800 innovations in science energy medicine transportation communication farm and factory production marketing beliefs customs and social relationships have drastically altered both natural and cultural environments Globally death rates have fallen dramatically without equivalent reductions in birth rates while per capita consumption of many natural resources has increased Many global trends are unsustainable and prompt action is needed to avoid calamities in the decades ahead Expanding environmental programs mitigate many trends but fail to reverse most of them Rival factions differ on the costs and benefits of development Some people have grave concerns about pollution waste disposal forest and wetland depletion species extinction crowding food shortages and a resurgence of epidemic diseases but others downplay these fears and oppose regulatory solutions We humans have the technology knowledge and resources to resolve our dilemma but lack the consensus and commitment It is what we accomplish that counts not what we boast of being able to do Failure to act now can cost future generations much more than it would cost now Environmental information is cast and expanding but often highly technical narrowly focused or self serving underscoring the need to summarize integrate and interpret findings for concerned publics Environmental Optimism in an Apocalyptic Age Scott T.
