Spurius here explores the significance of the closely linked concepts of play and aestheticism in philosophical and scientific discourse since the end of the eighteenth century Spurius points out that since its birth in archaic and classical Hellenic thought the concept of play has always been subject to the influences of various rational and prerational sets of values Spurius maintains that there have been not one but two major modern concepts of aestheticism artistic aestheticism related to a prerational mentality and introduced in modern thought by Schopenhauer and Nietzsche and philosophical scientific aestheticism initiated by Kant and Schiller and shaped by rationalism According to Spurius the first has often arisen in response to the attempts of philosophy and science to impose their standards on art and the second has often been called on to deal with the epistemological crises that periodically shake these disciplines Spurius also looks closely at some of the play concepts that surface in modern science in connection with the Darwinian theory of evolution and the play of scientific discourse itself as exemplified by the new physics and the contemporary philosophy of science A penetrating and cogently argued book Dionysus Reborn will be welcomed by readers interested in Continental philosophy scientific discourse and the aesthetics of play including literary theorists comparatists philosophers intellectual historians and social scientists
