provides an authoritative overview of the newly emerging focus on the archaeology of the present and recent past. In addition to detailed archaeological case studies it includes essays by scholars working on the relationships of different disciplines to the archaeology of the contemporary world including anthropology, psychology, philosophy, historical geography, science and technology studies, communications and media, ethnoarchaeology, forensic archaeology, sociology, film performance and contemporary art. This volume seeks to explore the boundaries of an emerging sub discipline to develop a tool kit of concepts and methods which are applicable to this new field and to suggest important future trajectories for research. It makes a significant intervention by drawing together scholars working on a broad range of themes, approaches, methods and case studies from diverse contexts in different parts of the world which have not previously been considered collectively.

Robert J. Hoage, William A. Deiss, 1996-05-07 From King Solomon's collections of apes and peacocks to the menageries of English and Hapsburg monarchs the display of exotic animals has delighted and amazed observers for centuries. Originally prized as symbols of elite wealth and power such collections have been dramatically transformed since 1800 particularly in terms of audience and purpose. In New Worlds, New Animals R J Hoage and William A Deiss assemble essays that concentrate on the development of the modern zoo in the nineteenth century. Taking an in depth look at the social climate of the century they chart the transition from elaborate menageries for exclusive patrons to public facilities that expressed the power and might of nations to institutions dedicated to public education, wildlife conservation and biological research. These changes reflect the larger transformation of the West from the colonial era's desire to tame newly discovered continents to today's more egalitarian conservation minded world. New Worlds, New Animals begins with an overview of the history of menageries in antiquity and their development in Europe and the United States. Zoos in many countries had quite different origins including a fish market that became an animal dealership before becoming a zoo and an Australian way station originally designed to acclimate Old World domestic stock to a new continent. The authors also examine the period in the United States between 1830 and 1880 when popular traveling animal shows and circuses gave way to the first public zoos in New York and Philadelphia. They take an in depth look at the establishment of the National Zoological Park in Washington D C the first zoo created to preserve endangered species. Illustrated with nearly 100 photographs New Worlds, New Animals gives readers a new respect for and understanding of the role of zoos in social and cultural history.
