

Theory and discuss

What is the pollution in the three pictures below?

1.1 The pollution

All the above pictures show large scale emissions of smoke through different agencies. This smoke directly mixes with the atmosphere, disturbing the balance between the constituents of air. This is called air pollution. harmful gases are given out through combustion of fuels in vehicles and in big industries and also through incineration of fuels like wood and coal. As a result, air pollution is increasing day by day.

Harmful substances released in air through combustion of fuels

- Nitrogen dioxide
- Carbon dioxide
- Carbon monoxide
- Sulphur dioxide
- Soot

Green house - the greenhouse effect

There is a layer of gases GHG gas in the lower part of atmosphere. These gas is not directly useful for the survival of living things, yet it is very important for living things to have the heat of sun at a high altitude around the earth. The above gases keep coming from the sun are very harmful for living things. The gases gas absorbs heat rays. As a result, life on earth is preserved.

The gases heat is destroyed if chemical gases like carbon compounds or the chlorofluorocarbons used in air conditioners and refrigerators mix with the air.

The task of September is celebrated as 'Green Protection Day' all over the world to make everyone aware of the importance of green.

Let's (your friend) guess!

What would have happened if there were no air in the world?

Let's (your friend) guess!

In meteorology when the barometer falls or drops, it means that there are chances of rain. The barometer is placed in places of heavy rainfall to show the proportion of the various constituents of the air at that place. One in three barometer, we can get the amount of harmful substance in the air.

1.2

Read

Let's (your friend) guess!

Observe how much water is used and for what purposes it is used in your house for a whole day. Record it in a chart like the one shown here. Observe this data in the class. Find the total amount of water used in your house for the number of persons in that one how much water each person needs.

You will see that it is almost impossible for us to spend even a single day without water. We need to drink water in the form of water every day so that all our bodily functions can smoothly. Other living things also require water although the amount of water they need may vary according to the size of their body. Thus, we see that water is very important.

If hydrology gets down to it, it continues with oxygen and water is found. We have learnt about some characteristics of water in the previous standards.

Theory and discuss

1.3 Distribution of water on the earth

Let's (your friend) guess!

Is it safe to drink the water in our city and around world even though it is salty?

1.4

Purpose for which water is used	Amount of Water supplied in litres
- Bath
- Washing work
- Washing clothes and utensils
- Mopping the floor
- Drinking
- Cooking
Total use of water

In nature, water occurs in three states. Water does not have colour, taste or odour. Many substances readily dissolve in water. Therefore, water is a universal solvent.

The threat of animals and the up in plants makes a very high proportion of water. For living things can survive without water. Therefore it is said that 'Water is life'.

Water available on earth	Percentage
Salt, brackish	97%
Water available for drinking (fresh water)	3%
Total	100%

We cannot use all the water on earth because seawater is salty. Fresh water is in the lower water. A very small quantity of water is available for drinking. Yet it is enough for all living things.
