Good Meal Prep Ideas For Beginners and Dummies Barbara Dawson, 2020-08-18 Meal prepping is making meals in advance for the week. It involves portioning out meals for later. If you've ever kept dinner leftovers from dinner to take with you for lunch the next day, you've prepared a mini meal. Meal prepping refers to preparing 3-7 days worth of food at a time. This kind of meal prep allows you to have lunches for the week all at once instead of making them every day. You can use the same techniques for breakfast, lunch, dinner, and snacks. Meal prepping saves time and reduces waste and reduces time spent cooking outside of your meal plan. It's a good budgeting tool. When you're not sure what to eat, meal prepping can help you come up with ideas. It's good for convenience and for those who are on a budget. With meal prepping, you'll eat the same thing for a few days in a row, so if you don't like leftovers or get bored with the same meal, it's not for you. If having a strict budget is your top priority, meal prepping every night is not for you. Meal prep is more efficient when you're maximizing your time and budget. It's more efficient to make a meal for one person than for a whole family. Meal prep for a whole family would be quite difficult because it would take a long time. In addition to the time it takes to prepare the food, the individual nuances of your taste preferences can impact the meal's acceptability. Texture and flavor will be subjective to the eater. Always begin with the FDA guidelines for food safety. The FDA guidelines are based on your own preferences. In general, it's better to store food for a few days than for a week. I find that it's better to store food for a few days than for a week. I find that it's better to store food for a few days than for a week.
