

To Build a Fire

by Jack London

Day had broken cold and grey, exceedingly cold and grey, from the main Yukon trail and climbed the high earth-bar travelled trail led eastward through the fat spruce timber! he paused for breath at the top, excusing the act to himself: it was nine o'clock. There was no sun nor hint of sun, though sky, it was a clear day, and yet there seemed an intangible subtle gloom that made the day dark, and that was due to the fact that the sun did not worry the man. He was used to the lack of sun. It had not been the sun, and he knew that a few more days must pass, would just peep above the sky-line and dip immed-

The man flung a look back along the way he had come, hidden under three feet of ice. On top of this ice were a pure white, rolling in gentle undulations where the ice-jar North and south, as far as his eye could see, it was unlike the dark and twisted from around the spruce-ct that curved and twisted away into the north, where I spruce-covered island. This dark hairline was the trail—five hundred miles to the Chilkoot Pass, Dyea, and salt-w miles to Dawson, and still on to the north a thousand miles to Michael on Bering Sea, a thousand miles and half a thou-

But all this—the mysterious, far-reaching hairline trail, the tremendous cold, and the strangeness and weirdness impression on the man, it was not because he was long used to it. He was a new-comer in the land, a chechague, and this was his first

The Tell-Tale Heart

by Edgar Allan Poe

True!—nervous—very, very dreadfully nervous I had been and am; but why will you say that I am mad? The disease had sharpened my senses—not destroyed—not dulled them. Above all was the sense of hearing acute. I heard all things in the heaven and in the earth. I heard many things in hell. How, then, am I mad? Hearken! and observe how healthily—how calmly I can tell you the whole story.

It is impossible to say how first the idea entered my brain; but once conceived, it haunted me day and night. Object there was none. Passion there was none. I loved the old man. He had never wronged me. He had never given me insult, for his gold I had no desire. I think it was his eye! yes, it was this! He had the eye of a vulture—a pale blue eye, with a film over it. Whenever it fell upon me, my blood ran cold; and so, by degrees—very gradually—I made up my mind to take the life of the old man, and thus rid myself of the eye forever.

Now this is the point, You fancy me mad. Madmen know nothing. But you should have seen me. You should have seen how wisely I proceeded—with what caution—with what foresight—with what dissimulation I went to work! I was never kinder to the old man than during the whole week before I killed him. And every night, about midnight, I turned the latch of his door and opened it—oh, so gently! And then, when I had made an opening sufficient for my head, I put in a dark lantern, all closed, closed, that no light shone out, and then I thrust in my head. Oh, you would have laughed to see how cunningly I thrust it in! I removed it slowly—very, very slowly, so that I might not disturb the old

Middle School Short Stories With Questions:

The Educational Review, 1896 Short Stories for Middle School Teresa Thuel, 2015-02-18 This book contains a wonderful selection of stories perfect for middle school. Each short selection will build vocabulary as well as comprehension listening and high level thinking skills. They are also a great way to introduce students to genres such as poetry, short story, speeches, history, expository writing, biography and more. Most stories provide opportunities to develop students' competence for Common Core Anchor Reading Standards.

Literacy Assessment and Intervention for Classroom Teachers

Beverly DeVries, 2017-07-05 The fourth edition of this comprehensive resource helps future and practicing teachers recognize and assess literacy problems while providing practical, effective intervention strategies to help every student succeed. The author thoroughly explores the major components of literacy, providing an overview of pertinent research, suggested methods and tools for diagnosis and assessment, intervention strategies and activities, and technology applications to increase students' skills. Discussions throughout focus on the needs of English learners, offering appropriate instructional strategies and tailored teaching ideas to help both teachers and their students. Several valuable appendices include assessment tools, instructions and visuals for creating and implementing the book's more than 150 instructional strategies and activities, and other resources.

Moe's Café Mark H. Larson, Robert S. Boone, 2006-10 While driving with your friends or family someplace far from home, your radiator starts steaming. You manage to find a gas station in a small town where they can fix your car, but it's going to take a few hours. You ask the mechanic if there's any place to get something to eat, and he points across the road to Moe's Café, a real dump. You don't have much choice, so you head inside and take a seat at the first booth on the left. So begins Moe's Café, one of 48 innovative and intriguing prompts for student writing. These classroom-tested prompts put students in a place or in front of a character and ask them to describe what they see. The thinking, writing, and scribbling they do for the prompts inspires them to create their own stories and poems. After writing 90-word mini stories, students read a short story or watch a film scene to help them expand on their own creative works. A section of longer readings models writing strategies. The lessons and activities reinforce and develop skills defined by the National Council of Teachers of English as appropriate for students in grades 6-12.
