Aging, adaptation and maladaptation

Thomas Lissek*

Interdisciplinary Center for Neurosciences, Heidelberg University, Heidelberg, Germany

Aging is accompanied by a dysregulation of adaptive processes. On the one hand, physiological adaptation mechanisms such as learning and memory, immune system plasticity and exercise-dependent muscle remodeling are blunted. On the other hand, several maladaptive processes increase with age including cancer, pathological cardiovascular remodeling and metabolic dysregulation. With increasing age the quotient of beneficial adaptation (Ab) to harmful adaptation (Ah), Ab/Ah , decreases. The adaptation-maladaptation framework of aging entails that there are age-related pathological phenotypes that are the result of activation of physiological adaptation mechanisms (e.g., maladaptation as a result of misdirection of adaptive cascades and molecular damage incurred by adaptation processes) and their occurrence over time might, to some degree, be inevitable. Aging might hence result from the organism's inability to solve the adaptation-maladaptation dilemma. The present work explores the concept of counteracting aging through adaptation and proposes that interventions such as exercise, environmental enrichment and dietary restriction work in counteracting aging because they increase the ratio Ab/Ah by both raising Ab (e.g., by inducing metaplasticity in cells, meaning they raise the adaptability of cells to future stimuli) and decreasing Ah (e.g., through desensitizing certain potentially harmful adaptive mechanisms). Molecules whose aging-related expression changes can explain aspects of dysfunctional adaptation such as CREB and certain immediate early genes are examined and it is delineated how a better understanding of the dynamical organization of adaptation cascades could elucidate the seemingly complex role of adaptation in driving aging as well as protecting against it.

Introduction

One of the major symptoms of aging in animals is a decreased body-wide ability for adaptation, which expresses itself as impaired neural plasticity (Berke and Barnes, 2006), decreased adaptive immune function (Weng, 2006) and blunted muscle anabolism (Breen and Phillips, 2011) among others. As adaptation is a fundamental property of organism function, its reduction leads to profound physiological impairments and in older humans is expressed, among other things, in reduced cognitive flexibility (Hedden and Gabrieli, 2004), decreased mobility (Rantakoski et al., 2013) and increased susceptibility to infectious diseases (Gavrilov and Kramer, 2007). At the same time, during aging many maladaptive processes increase including dysfunctional remodeling of metabolism in diabetes (Sinclair et al., 2012), autoimmunity (Goronyo and Wherry, 2012), changes in the cardiovascular system such as atherosclerosis (Head et al., 2017) as well as oncogenesis (White et al., 2014).

The present work explores how dysregulated adaptation is a central feature in animal aging and provides a framework to integrate various findings on the biology of aging at

Evidence-Based Programming for Older Adults Marcia G. Ory, Matthew Lee Smith, 2015-06-17 There is increased world wide concern about the impact of multiple chronic conditions especially among the rapidly aging population Simultaneously over the past decade there has been an emergence of state wide and national initiatives to reduce the burden of chronic conditions that draw upon the translation of evidence based programs EPB into community practice Yet little has been written about the national and international implementation dissemination and sustainability of such programs This Research Topic features articles about EBPs for older adults including a range of articles that focus on the infrastructure needed to widely disseminate EBP as well as individual participant impacts on physical mental and social aspects of health and well being Using a pragmatic research perspective this Research Topic will advance knowledge that aims to enhance practice inform policy and build systems of support and delivery in regard to the reach effectiveness adoption implementation and maintenance of evidence based interventions for older adults The focus is on knowledge transfer rather than knowledge generation but with a dual emphasis on the dissemination and sustainability of EBP that have been tested and shown effective as well as the adaptation of practice based interventions into evidence based programs This Research Topic draws upon grand scale efforts to deliver these programs and include both U S as well as international examples Commentaries discuss processes in the development and measurement of EBP and reflect perspectives from program developers and major national and regional funders of EBP as well as professionals and practitioners in the field The full length articles focus on four major programmatic areas 1 chronic disease self management programs 2 fall prevention programs 3 general wellness and physical activity programs and 4 mental health programs Additionally articles are included to discuss cross cutting issues related to building partnerships and the research infrastructure for the implementation evaluation and dissemination of evidence based programming The intent of this Research Topic is to enhance practice inform policy and build systems of support and delivery for EBP It is written for a diverse audience and contains practical implications and recommendations for introducing delivering and sustaining EBP in a multitude of settings

Gerontechnologies for Home Support Alexander Moreno, Sumi Helal, Henk Herman Nap, Gloria M. Gutman, 2024-10-07. In recent years various digital and non digital gerontechnology applications in home support have been developed. From medication administration aids e.g. reminders and alarms to environmental monitoring e.g. air quality sensors and cameras to fall detection and health and activity monitoring e.g. smartwatch these promising solutions are in the works or already in the marketplace. Additionally the COVID 19 pandemic has accelerated the development and deployment of technological solutions supporting remote care and communication e.g. video calls and home service delivery e.g. meals and groceries both of which have been developed to facilitate aging in place. This is significant especially as avoiding the institutionalization of older adults has become a major goal of governments and caring families around the world. These technologies are a potential solution to help older adults and family caregivers age at home maintain autonomy and independence and avoid social isolation. These technologies can reduce the workload of professional caregivers. It is crucial to update our knowledge on evidence based technologies for home support tested simultaneously in older adults and their family caregivers.

Healthcare professionals and families are often disadvantaged by a lack of information demonstrating their utility and cost effectiveness. This article collection focuses on providing evidence based information about emerging and existing gerontechnologies which is essential to make an informed decision in recommending their use or deciding to purchase them. For older adults it will provide proofs upon which to make an informed decision to invest in a specific technology when needed. For family caregivers it will improve their judgment when trying to choose purchase and adopt a technology aiming to solve a problem at home and have peace of mind when these technologies are used to support their loved ones. For clinicians it will provide a pool of evidence based technological tools that could be recommended to families facing the loss of autonomy and independence of older adults. For researchers and scholars it will provide a base of knowledge for future applied research in gerontechnology. Finally improving the evidence in gerontechnology will help to provide cues for policymakers and governments to create legislation aiming to protect the public and the end users of these technologies.

Handbook of Social Work in Health and Aging Barbara Berkman, 2006-02-09 The fields of health care aging and social work are often treated as discrete entities while all social workers deal with issues of health and aging on a daily basis regardless of practice specialization. The Handbook of Social Work in Health and Aging is the first reference to address this reality by compiling the most current thinking on these subjects in a single volume. With the population of older adults increasing as rapidly as new possibilities for their care professionals need an accessible source of specialized information about how best to serve the elderly and their families and they will find this authoritative handbook indispensable. In 100 original chapters the most experienced and prominent gerontological health care scholars in the United States and across the world provide social workers with up to date knowledge of evidence based practice guidelines for effectively assessing and treating older adults and supporting their families. The contributing authors paint rich portraits of a variety of populations that social workers serve and arenas in which they practice followed by detailed recommendations of best practices for an array of physical and mental health conditions. Its unprecedented attention to diversity global trends and implications for research government policy and education make the publication of such a compendium a major event in the field of gerontological social work. Ambitious and multi dimensional this handbook represents the best research on health and aging available to social workers today.

Case-based Geriatrics: A Global Approach Victor A. Hirth, Darryl Wieland, Maureen Dever-Bumba, 2010-12-31 A full color case based guide to the principles and clinical aspects of geriatric care. Case Based Geriatrics utilizes a case and evidence based approach to help you understand the key principles and clinical points of geriatric medicine and healthcare. Written to reflect the field's growing trend toward interdisciplinary collaboration the book is of value not only to physicians but to the entire health team involved in the care of the elderly. This unique text is constructed around case presentations which are used as the primary teaching tool. These cases reflect issues and principles of geriatrics that are encountered and practiced worldwide. You will learn how cultural characteristics of both patients and providers have added new layers of complications to this already challenging field and how they can be recognized and overcome Each case is directly linked to the learning objectives found in each chapter Review questions appear at the beginning and end of each chapter to test your understanding Case Based Geriatrics is divided into three sections Issues in Aging features foundational chapters covering essential topics such as biology of aging worldwide demographics the geriatric physical exam sensory changes in aging and approaches to laboratory testing and imaging in aging Inter professional Geriatrics provides an overview of multi professional team care and covers important topics such as pre and post operative care discharge planning and transitional care end of life care home care and long term care Geriatric Syndromes and Important Issues covers common disorders such as delirium dementia depression stroke hypertension osteoporosis and more
