

Epidemiology Case Study: Paralytic Illness in Ababo

PART I

It is the early 1990s. The World Health Organization is planning a program for the global eradication of polio by the year 2000. Likura, a fictitious nation in south-central Africa, may become one of the countries selected to test the effectiveness of WHO's polio eradication strategies. Unfortunately, little is known about polio in Likura. The Minister of Health therefore assigned the task of assessing the polio situation to a Ministry worker who has recently returned from an epidemiology course in Atlanta, and who is about to become the District Health Officer in the Ababo District. The Ababo District is a relatively poor, rural district with a single hospital and several health centers. The Ababo District has attempted to conduct surveillance on polio cases and deaths over the past five years. The hospital, health centers, and all health workers are supposed to report such cases to the District Health Officer.

Question 1

Define incidence and write the formula to calculate the incidence rate (1 point).

Incidence can be defined as the rate of occurrence or frequency of a disease. It is a measurement of cases in a given population at a given time period (Hinton, 2014).

Incidence rate = Number of cases / population at risk in a given time period.

Question 2

Define prevalence and write the formula to calculate the prevalence rate (1 point).

Prevalence is the proportion of a population which has or had a certain thing such as illness or condition in a given time.
