Muscle and tendon injuries are prevalent in both tactical, military, law enforcement, fire services and sporting populations, often leading to significant time loss, reduced performance and long term health consequences. These injuries can result from a variety of mechanisms including acute trauma, overuse and inadequate recovery. Understanding the commonalities and differences in injury mechanisms as well as developing effective prevention and rehabilitation strategies is crucial for maintaining the health and performance of individuals in these demanding fields. This Research Topic aims to enhance our understanding of injury mechanisms across different populations and activities and promote the development of effective evidence based prevention and rehabilitation strategies which foster interdisciplinary collaboration to improve health and performance outcomes. We seek research that addresses the following criteria: Research in physically active populations including either sporting or tactical populations. This can include research on any level of sporting participation, recreational to elite sport, as well as any tactical population, military, law enforcement, fire services. Muscle and/or tendon injuries to any body region. This can include upper limb e.g. rotator cuff, lower limb gastrocnemius or trunk e.g. abdominal oblique injury. Injury resulting from any mechanism. This can include acute trauma e.g. tendon rupture, muscle tear, overuse e.g. tendinopathy, or physiological responses to training e.g. delayed onset muscle soreness. Focussed on the epidemiology, aetiology, diagnosis, prevention or management of injuries in physically active populations. This call for research includes the following submission types: Original Research, Systematic Review, Scoping Review, Narrative Review, Policy and Practice Review, Study Protocol, Mini Review, Perspective, Case Report, Brief Research Report, General Commentary and Opinion. Alternative Models of Sports Development in America B. David Ridpath, 2018-01-16. In the United States, the entanglement of sports and education has persisted for over a century. Multimillion dollar high school football stadiums, college coaches whose salaries are many times those of their institutions' presidents, psychological and educational tolls on student athletes, and high profile academic scandals are just symptoms of a system that has come under increasing fire. Institutions large and small face persistent quandaries: which do they value more, academic integrity or athletic success? Which takes precedence: prioritizing elite teams and athletes or making it possible for all students to participate in sports? How do we create opportunities for academic, not just athletic, development for players? In Alternative Models of Sports Development in America B. David Ridpath, a leading sports development researcher who has studied both the US system and the European club model, offers clear steps toward creating a new status quo. He lays out four possible alternative models that draw various elements from academic, athletic, and European approaches. His proposals will help increase access of all young people to the benefits of sports and exercise allow athletes to also thrive as students and improve competitiveness The result is a book that will resonate with sports development professionals academic administrators and parents
