Ungovernable Spaces Kristen Kreider, James O'Leary, 2025-05 This book presents a range of global practice-based case studies that conceptualise community formation in times of social and political turbulence as a process that emerges through local political activism and resistance. A truly interdisciplinary work at the intersection of visual culture, the built environment, and poetics, it explores these individual acts of resistance and argues for a necessary interrelation between politics, ethics, and aesthetics. In doing so, it sets out to conceive a new poetics of us and demonstrate how the formation of community in and through resistance on a planetary scale has the potential to introduce new models of social and cultural interaction.

Challenging Aging: The Anti-senescence Effects of Hormesis, Environmental Enrichment and Information Exposure Marios Kyriazis, 2016-08-30

Age-related degeneration may be reduced or even eliminated by positively challenging the human being physically or cognitively to upregulate somatic repair functions. Exposure to meaningful information and a challenging environment act as hormetic stressors which in the context of an increasingly technological setting may invoke evolutionary mechanisms that lead to a persistent maintenance of homeostasis. Thus there is a strong link between environmental factors and ongoing health, leading to an individual's ability to continually adapt to age-related challenges.

Challenging Ageing: The Anti-senescence Effects of Hormesis, Environmental Enrichment and Information Exposure explains the role of hormesis in anti-aging processes, followed by information on vitagenes, epigenetics, environmental enrichment, and germlines. The monograph also brings newer concepts and theories to the fore, such as environmental enrichment and technoculture. Medical professionals and general readers alike will gain a new perspective on the processes that counter aging processes in the human being.
