Memorandum

Date: September 21, 2013

To: John Smith, CEO

From: Teresa Richardson, CAE

RE: Independence and Objectivity of the Internal Audit Department

As requested, I have prepared the following outline with the goal of reassuring senior management that the internal audit department is both independent and objective. I have provided detail on what is considered independence and objectivity, based on guidance from the International Institute of Internal Auditors (IIA). I have also outlined steps taken by TechNet to ensure the internal audit department is in fact independent and objective.

The internal audit department at TechNet is in full compliance with the IIA's International Standards for the Professional Practice of Internal Auditing. Standard 1100 of the IIA require that "the internal audit activity must be independent, and internal auditors must be objective in performing their work." Independence refers to the freedom of the internal auditor to carry out activities in an unbiased manner. Objectivity refers to an unbiased mental attitude of the internal auditor without subordinating their judgement to others. To assist organizations in accomplishing independence and objectivity the IIA sets out mandatory guidelines that must be followed. At TechNet, we comply with those guidelines.

Various controls and safeguards such as reporting relationships and segregation of duties are in place at TechNet to ensure independence. Independence requires that the internal audit activities are free from interference in determining the scope of the internal audit, freedom to perform the work and freedom to communicate the results. This requires the CAE to report to a level in the organization which would allow the internal audit activity the ability to perform these responsibilities. Standard 1110 states this independence can be achieved by the auditor functionally reporting to the board of directors.

At TechNet, the CAE reports functionally to the audit committee which is made up of members of the board of directors that are external to the organization. As per IIA Practice Advisory 1110-1, this will allow for unrestricted internal audit coverage and helps to ensure audit recommendations are adequately acted upon. This functional reporting consists of the audit committee approving the Internal Audit Charter, the risk-based audit plan, the internal audit budget and resource requirements, and the CAE's appointment, removal and remuneration. The audit committee reviews the performance of the internal audit department as well as any scope and budgetary limitations that may impede the internal audit function.

Administratively, the CAE reports to the CEO. This reporting relationship is strongly recommended by IIA Practice Advisory 1110-1. This administrative reporting relationship helps to facilitate the day to day operations of the internal audit department including management accounting, human resources administration, administration of the organization's policies and procedures and internal communications.
