Excerpt from Memoirs of General Count Rapp First Aide De Camp to Napoleon On the death of the brave Desaix who was killed at Marengo at the moment when he had decided the victory the First Consul deigned to appoint me to a post about his own person The favour which he would have conferred on the conqueror of Upper Egypt was extended to me From that time I was in some manner permanently established and my connexions became more extended About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Memoirs of Napoleon (Classic Reprint) Louis Bourrienne, 2015-07-08

Excerpt from Memoirs of Napoleon An historian will one day arise who will do justice to Bonaparte's merit as for myself I do not even pretend to aspire to the honour of being his biographer I am only about to relate all that I know of this extraordinary man and which I believe I know well that which I have seen and heard and of which I have preserved numerous notes With confidence I call him an extraordinary man who owing everything to himself acquired the most absolute sway over a great and enlightened nation obtained so many victories subdued so many states distributed crowns to his family made and unmade kings and who became nearly the most ancient sovereign in Europe and who was without doubt the most distinguished of his age such an individual cannot be called an ordinary man Napoleon Bonaparte was born at Ajaccio in Corsica on the 15th of August 1769 The name was originally written Buonaparte but during the first campaign in Italy he dropped the u merely to render the spelling conformable with the pronunciation and to abridge his signature About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Napoleon's Library Louis N Sarkozy, 2024-07-30

Explores the enigmatic Napoleon Bonaparte's intimate relationship with books and history going far beyond his more militaristic and imperial fame Napoleon Bonaparte held absolute political power in France and his influence stretched across Europe and beyond Yet he remained between leading his armies and ruling over a vast empire an indefatigable reader who even carried libraries into battle

Bonaparte's love of the written word birthed in childhood and nurtured as an adolescent and young adult never left him. He was a lover of literature for its own sake, often swooning over melodramatic love stories, but he also understood the value of books as instruments of power. Before his campaigns, he poured over dozens of texts relating to the relevant theaters, geography, population, trade, and history. When contemplating grave decisions such as his divorce of Empress Josephine, he consulted the historical record for useful precedents to justify and inform his actions. To bolster his troops' morale during challenging times, he constantly referenced history in his proclamations, making his contemporaries feel as if they were actively shaping history. They were. The library of an individual is the key to his mind. Behind the grandiose paintings of the victorious conqueror and the constructions of the propagandist stands the reader. This book is an attempt to glimpse Napoleon's character without the veneer of imperial glory. What was he like alone at night by his fireplace? What thoughts percolated in the mind of the ambitious 20-year-old isolated in a little room while theorizing about man's happiness? Who are the literary and historical figures which can claim to have had impacted his life? Who were his favorite authors? Through this book, the reader will embark on a literary promenade with the great general and statesman. In these pages are found the emperor's favorite authors. And with them, the key to understanding his mind.

Memoirs of Napoleon Bonaparte, Vol. 3 of 4 (Classic Reprint) Louis Antoine Fauvelet De Bourrienne, 2018-01-24

Excerpt from Memoirs of Napoleon Bonaparte Vol 3 of 4: The tribune Ouree had the honour of first proposing officially the conversion of the Consular Republic into an Empire and the elevation of Bonaparte to the title of Emperor with hereditary right. Curée developed his proposition in the meeting of the 30th April at which I was present. He commenced by exposing the miseries which had overwhelmed France from the Constitutional Assembly down to the 18th Brumaire, a revolution which he justly characterized as a deliverance. He then passed in review the brilliant career of the present head of the Republic, enumerated his claims to the gratitude of France, shewed that her flourishing condition depended on him. Let us haste then to demand the hereditary transmission of the supreme magistracy for in voting for an hereditary chief as Pliny said to Trajan we bar the return of a master. But at the same time let us give a great name to a great power, let us choose a title which while it carries the idea of the highest civil functions may recall glorious remembrances and breathe no taint upon the sovereignty of the people. I can see for the guardian of a national power none more befitting than the title of Emperor.

Memoirs of Napoleon Bonaparte, the Court of the First Empire, Vol. 2 (Classic Reprint) Claude-François de Méneval, 2017-10-11 Excerpt from Memoirs of Napoleon Bonaparte the Court of the First Empire Vol 2 Assistance and I asked the Emperor to give me a companion The idea then came to him to create two posts of Secretary to the Cabinet and he appointed General Clarke who now that the death of the King of Etruria had closed his mission to this prince was without employment to one of these places The Emperor appearing to neglect him Clarke followed him step by step during his journey in Alsatia placing himself before him each time that he had the Opportunity of recalling himself to his memory On his return from this short journey the Emperor told me that not wishing to interrupt the unity of the work of his private work room he had made up his mind to charge the general with the title of Secretary to the Cabinet with a Special class of work viz his correspondence with the Ministers of War and Marine and that this would be a notable reduction of my day s work General Clarke was accordingly established in a private office But the necessity of sending for him to write to his ministers often kept the Emperor back from making use of his services in one word the post degenerated into a sinecure The second post of Secretary to the Cabinet was also vacant About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Memoirs of Napoleon Bonaparte, Vol. 4 of 4 (Classic Reprint) Louis Antoine Fauvelet de Bourrienne, 2016-08-13 Excerpt from Memoirs of Napoleon Bonaparte Vol 4 of 4 Even now I am filled with astonishment when I think Of the council that was held at the Tuileries on the 13th Of March The ignorance of the members of that council respecting our situation and their confidence in the useless measures they had adopted against Napoleon exceed all conception Will it be believed that those great statesmen who had the control Of the telegraph the post office the police and its agents money in short every thing which constitutes power asked me to give them information respecting the advance of Bonaparte What could I say to them I could only repeat the reports which were circulated on the Exchange and those which I had collected here and there during the last twenty four hours I did not conceal that the danger was imminent and that all their precautions would be Of no avail The question then arose as to what course should be adopted by the king It was impossible that the monarch could remain in the capital and yet where was he to go One proposed that he should go to Bordeaux another to La Vendee and a third to Normandy and a fourth member of the council was Of opinion that the king should be conducted to Melun I conceived that if a battle should take place any where it would probably be in the neighbourhood Of that town but the counsellor who made this last suggestion assured us that the presence Of the king in an open carriage and eight horses

Memoirs to Serve for the History of Napoleon I, Vol. 2 Baron Claude-Francois De Meneval, 2015-07-06 Excerpt from Memoirs to Serve for the History of Napoleon I Vol 2 From 1802 to 1815 General Clarke who followed the Emperor in this campaign with me was appointed governor of Vienna He was entrusted with several missions abroad after this campaign and his post as Secretary to the Cabinet remained as unoccupied as the second post The assistance which it had been the Emperor's intention to give me was accordingly only an illusory one Another year passed without any change being made in the work in the cabinet I repeated my application to Napoleon to obtain an assistant What I needed above all was to be relieved of the care of the papers which had to be classified after having been answered The multiplicity of my occupations prevented me from keeping these papers in sufficiently good order to be able to find any draft of a letter or a despatch which the Emperor might want to see at a moment's notice Napoleon avoided satisfying my request for some time longer either by making promises which he did not keep or on various pretexts He used to urge me to get married assuring me that he would arrange my work in such a manner that I should get some rest Various matches were proposed to me by him and the Empress Josephine including a lady who was one of her relations and whom she obliged me to call upon at her house But at that time I did not feel any vocation for marriage Besides I was determined that if I ever did make up my mind to get married I would choose my own wife As a matter of fact more than two years passed before I contracted the irrevocable bonds the solemnity of which so impressed me Seeing that the Emperor put off keeping his promise every day I became discouraged and fell ill as much from worry as from overwork About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of
