for products offered free of charge i.e. without monetary consideration by those who receive the product

ASSESSMENT The application of competition law often requires an assessment of market power. Using market shares as indicators of market power in addition to all the difficulties in standard markets raises further issues for two-sided platforms. When calculating revenue shares, the only reasonable option is to use the sum of revenues on all sides of the platform. Then such shares should not be interpreted as market shares as they are aggregated over two interdependent markets. Large revenue shares appear to be a meaningful indicator of market power if all undertakings under consideration serve the same sides. However, they are often not meaningful if undertakings active in the relevant markets follow different business models. Given potentially strong cross-group external effects, market shares are less apt in the context of two-sided platforms to indicate market power or the lack of it. Barriers to entry are at the core of persistent market power and thus the entrenchment of incumbent platforms. They deserve careful examination by competition authorities. Barriers to entry may arise due to users' coordination failure in the presence of network effects. On two-sided platforms, users on both sides of the market have to coordinate their expectations. Barriers to entry are more likely to be present if an industry does not attract new users and if it does not undergo major technological change. Switching costs and network effects may go hand in hand. Consumer switching costs sometimes depend on the number of platform users and in this case barriers to entry from consumer switching costs increase with platform size. Since market power is related to barriers to entry, the absence of entry attempts may be seen as an indication of market power. However, entry threats may arise from firms offering quite different services as long as they provide a new home for users' attention and needs.

Developing New Products and Services Lawrence Sanders, 2011-10-14. This book will focus on the up-front activities required for product and service differentiation: the learning methodologies that contribute to arriving at that differentiation and the role that technology plays in implementing the process. The book will show how technology factors into such entrepreneurial activities as engaging in business planning and utilizing creativity and innovation and how creative innovation in turn is achieved and enhanced through an understanding of two different modes of learning: learning about and learning by doing. A successful product introduction depends on an efficient supply chain, a strong brand, and the ability of a manufacturer or provider to differentiate it successfully in the marketplace. New Product and Services Development demonstrates how differentiation, this last critical component, can be secured by the strategic use of technology and by engaging in two key learning methodologies.
