Edward Freeman,Ellen R. Auster,2015-08-17 Bridging the Values Gap Business has a values problem It s not just spectacular public scandals like Enron which incidentally had a great corporate values statement Many companies fail to live up to the standards they set for themselves alienating the public and leaving employees cynical and disengaged resulting in lower productivity less innovation and sometimes outright corruption The reason argue top scholars and consultants Edward Freeman and Ellen Auster is that all too often values are handed down from on high with little employee input discussion or connection to the challenges and opportunities facing the organization Although the words may be well intentioned they aren t reflected in the everyday practices policies and processes of the organization This practically invites disconnects between intention and reality To bridge this gap between the talk and the walk Freeman and Auster provide a process through which organizations can collectively surface deeply held values that truly resonate with everyone from top to bottom Their Values Through Conversation VTC process focuses on four key types of values conversations introspective reflecting on ourselves and how we do things in the organization historical exploring our understanding of our past and how it impacts us connectedness creating a strong community where we work well together and aspirational sharing our hopes and dreams By developing values through discussions casual or formal one on one or in groups VTC ensures that values are dynamic and evolving not static words on a wall or a website Freeman and Auster offer advice real world examples and sample questions to help you create values that are authentic and embraced because they are rooted in the lived experience of the organization

Majora Carter,2006-10-19 Majora Carter shows how brain drain cripples low status communities and maps out a development strategy focused on talent retention to help them break out of economic stagnation My musical In the Heights explores issues of community gentrification identity and home and the question Are happy endings only ones that involve getting out of your neighborhood to achieve your dreams In her refreshing new book Majora Carter writes about these issues with great insight and clarity asking us to re examine our notions of what community development is and how we invest in the futures of our hometowns This is an exciting conversation worth joining Lin Manuel Miranda How can we solve the problem of persistent poverty in low status communities Majora Carter argues that these areas need a talent retention strategy just like the ones companies have Retaining homegrown talent is a critical part of creating a strong local economy that can resist gentrification But too many people born in low status communities measure their success by how far away from them they can get Carter who could have been one of them returned to the South Bronx and devised a development strategy rooted in the conviction that these communities have the resources within themselves to succeed She advocates measures such as Building mixed income instead of exclusively low income housing to create a diverse and robust economic ecosystem Showing homeowners how to maximize the long term value of their property so they won't succumb to quick cash offers from speculators Keeping people and dollars in the community by developing vibrant third spaces restaurants bookstores and places like Carter's own Boogie Down Grind Cafe This is a profoundly personal book Carter writes about her brother's murder how turning a local dumping ground into an award winning park opened her eyes to the hidden potential in her community her struggles as a woman of color confronting the male and pale real estate and nonprofit establishments and much more It is a powerful rethinking of poverty economic development and the meaning of success
