These are the procedures which should reduce the potential for errors and increase the effectiveness of the planning process. These procedures have been developed by the authors for use in their own planning process. They have not been tested, and therefore, require further research and validation for use in other planning processes.

The author emphasizes Peacock's "soft" conservatism, meaning a desire to keep the status quo and minimize social change, especially with regard to property relations. "Any change whatsoever" probably refers to social or political movements that threaten to alter the property and inheritance laws, such as the peasant and workers' movements that were consolidated under Peacock. The term "soft" means Peacock's ability to say what he wanted, without revealing his supporters or the sources of his ideas.

other discovered using this technique and requires a minimum of one hour of computer time. The time required varies with the complexity of the system being studied (see Fig. 1). Results for the children are shown and the results for adult subjects are similar.

- 1. Leadership and Reward Contingency Theory
  - a. The "FOL" uses the leadership and relationship style of the leader to direct the style of reward given. (See Fig. 1, page 11).
  - b. Satisfaction and motivation means the supervisor can set more clear bounds between his various relationships to their members. The more pleasure he can be derived by the supervisor the more he can derive from the work of his manager. (See Fig. 1, page 11).
  - c. The manager should have the characteristics of being a good leader, particularly, concern for the welfare of the personnel, the ability to work with others, etc.
  - d. The reward should be clearly understood and be the same reward for everyone. (See Fig. 1, page 11).

Morse Controls Manual:

Noise Control Manual David A. Harris, 2013-03-09 Excessive noise levels are generally acknowledged to have adverse effects on our environment. Studies indicate that excessive noise levels can cause fatigue in exposed individuals, lower efficiency and productivity, impaired speech communication and hearing loss. Excessive noise is almost everywhere today in the office, in schools, hospitals and other institutional facilities, in all classes of public buildings and in our factories.

INDUSTRIAL NOISE High noise levels in factories can make speech communication in the plant difficult and at times impossible. Foremen are often unable to hear warning shouts from co-workers. The problem of hearing loss due to excessive noise exposure is of particular concern to industry and to the federal government. In the early 1970s the United States Congress passed the Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA) which sets criteria for health hazards and established limits for noise exposure of industrial workers. The OSHA Noise Standard was amended in 1982 to require audiometric testing of all employees exposed to noise levels of 85 dB or above for eight hours.

A NOISE IN COMMERCIAL AND INSTITUTIONAL BUILDINGS While noise levels in offices, stores, schools and other commercial and institutional buildings seldom reach those encountered in many industrial environments, they often reach levels which are distracting to the occupants of such buildings. Impairment of speech communication among workers or inversely the lack of speech privacy are both deterrents to efficiency and productivity and are detrimental to the occupants' comfort and sense of well-being.

More people are spending more time at home, making more noise yet they want quiet environments. This is the only book available that tells designers, planners, architects and builders how to give homeowners and apartment dwellers the quiet they crave. Simple enough to be used by the average do-it-yourselfer, it avoids complex mathematics yet so complete it will satisfy the requirements of knowledgeable building professionals. This authoritative guide gives you one-stop answers on designing, specifying, testing and retrofitting residences to meet the new environmental standards and satisfy our need for peace and quiet.
