The New PR Toolkit Deirdre

Breakenridge, Thomas J. DeLoughry, 2003 The New PR Toolkit is a compelling preview of the present and the future of public relations and a practical roadmap for becoming a strategic communicator      Public Relations Democracy Aeron Davis, 2002-05-03 This book looks at the rapid expansion of professional public relations and discusses its effects on the mass media and political process      On Deadline Carole M. Howard, Wilma K. Mathews, 2013-03-01 Media relations professionals must know how to stay ahead of the game to be effective in today's complex world. It is no longer enough that they craft news releases, orchestrate interviews and build sustaining relationships with reporters. Their multiple roles now include planner, crisis manager, communicator, counselor and strategist. Called virtually an encyclopedia of media relations by one reviewer, the Fifth Edition covers relationships with reporters, spokesperson training, news conferences and special events, integrating media relations into marketing communications plans, crisis management, global media relations, ethics, establishing a media policy within the organization, measuring results and becoming a counselor to management. Its practical advice and how-to ideas draw on current case studies, most involving social media, and the authors' extensive experience in the U.S. and around the world. With a clear and fast-moving style, the Fifth Edition maintains its status as the foremost book on media relations in the corporate and nonprofit sectors. It is a must read for prospective and current media relations professionals dedicated to maximizing their organizations' results      Journalism and PR John Lloyd, Laura Toogood, 2014-11-18 Public relations and journalism have had a difficult relationship for over a century, characterised by mutual dependence and often mutual distrust. The two professions have vied with each other for primacy; journalists could open or close the gates, but PR had the stories, the contacts and often the budgets for extravagant campaigns. The arrival of the internet and especially of social media has changed much of that. These new technologies have turned the audience into players who play an important part in making the reputation and the brand of everyone, from heads of state to new car models, vulnerable to viral tweets and social media attacks. Companies, parties and governments are seeking more protection, especially since individuals within these organisations can themselves damage even destroy their brand or reputation with an ill-chosen remark or an appearance of arrogance. The pressures and the possibilities of the digital age have given public figures and institutions both a necessity to protect themselves and channels to promote themselves, free of news media gatekeepers. Political and corporate communications professionals have become more essential and more influential within the top echelons of business, politics and other institutions. Companies and governments can now, must now, become media themselves, putting out a message 24/7, establishing channels of their own, creating content to attract audiences and reaching out to their networks to involve them in their strategies. Journalism is being brought into these new, more influential and fast-growing communications strategies. And as newspapers struggle to stay alive, journalists must adapt to a world where old barriers are being smashed and new relationships built. This time, with public relations in the driving seat, the world being created is at once more protected and more transparent; the communicators are at once more influential and more fragile. This unique study illuminates a new
