

How to choose the right stereo when there are so many right stereos to choose from.

Choosing the right stereo can be a monumental task. Or as simple as one, two, three. Four, five. Because Panasonic has put FM, AM, FM stereo and phono together in so many right combinations, one just has to be right for you.

Here are some of your choices:

1. The "Galaxy," SE-850. A lot of stereo for a lot less than you'd expect. With many of the features that our more expensive models have. A 4-speed record changer. AFC and FET on FM. And separate bass, volume, treble, and balance controls. So you always hear Bach the way you want to hear Bach.

2. The "Spartan," SE-970. With the same features we told you about in the "Galaxy." But this one's a split-level model. Just pull up the radio and there's a turntable underneath. The whole unit's in midnight black and silver. And the speakers stand on pedestals.

3. The "Cahill," SE-1099. A special model with a special trick. After it shuts itself off, you can make the changer disappear into the cabinet. But it's hard to put away, with the big sound you get out of our air-suspension speakers and integrated circuits. We also have something special on FM. 4 sensitive IF stages to let you pull in distant stations. And linear scale tuning to keep each station separate and distinct.

4. The "Arlington," SE-990. With another kind of stereo. Cassettes. And everything on this everything unit is simple to operate. Because pushbuttons work the 4-track cassette system. And a VU meter shows you whether you're recording at the right level. Like all our units, it has solid-state engineering.

5. The "Lindsay," SE-3080. Another "switchie" model. Only this lets you switch to an 8-track cartridge player as well as radio and phono. It even has an automatic channel selector so you can choose the one track you want to hear. Plus a repeat switch to play the track over and over again.

1, 2, 3, 4, 5. We even have 6, 7, etc. At your Panasonic dealer. All of them are right. But you'll find one of them is more right for you than the others.
