SOKKIA CX-105

Basic introduction to the handling of a total station.

A total station is the basic equipment for the 'classic' measurement of an engineer, surveyor. In the past, angles were measured separately (theodolite) and the distances (distancemeter) were noted down in a notebook. But now with the total stations take all the data together and are collected in digital data collectors for the subsequent conversion of the coordinates to CAD programs.
