

There are two groups that make up the auxiliary drum corps section (drumline), the pit and the battery, the marching pathfinders with their instruments make up the battery. The pit refers to the front sideline section of the band that does not take part in marching. A drumline in this context involves a section of percussion instruments usually played as part of auxiliary musical ensemble.

In addition to the criteria set by the church drums instructor, and the local pathfinder club, section leaders' selection can also be based on their ability to:

1. Maintain a level of discipline within their section.
2. Accept instructions from church drums instructor.
3. Teach their portion of the cadence to their section.
4. Maintain respect among their peers and sections.

Normally, the drum corps instructor or a joint effort between the members of a section and the drum corps instructor might select a section leader for each section of the drum corps.

DUTIES OF SECTION LEADER(S)

---

1. The section leader whether snares, tenor (multi-toms), Bass, brass, wind, cymbal or auxiliary meet with the church drum instructor to learn an arrangement, routine or cadence, and then teaches it to the section.
2. The section leaders collectively organize practices for all sections, to fine tune the cadence for performance.
3. The Section Leader in liaison with the church instructor determines rehearsal schedule, and uniform regulations for the section players.
4. The leader also ensures players' uniform regulation conformity that is right uniform is worn and with proper placement and rehearsal routine and schedule are adhered to.
5. Section leaders are responsible for the training and developing of the sections as they relate to the entire drum corps.

NON-COMMISSIONED DRUMS LEADERS

---

Drum Corps and Marching Bands are an integral part of the club formations and parades which are normally under the operational command of the parade Adjutant or Marshall.

While players and the bands act on the verbal commands of the parade Marshall, they also respond to the visual signals of their conductor (drums instructor), thus reducing the need for separate commands to the corps or band.

1. When drum corps or bands of different types are combined, the brass-wood band conductor shall normally be in charge of the combined bands.
2. The conductor is either the drums instructor or non-commissioned member (NCM) responsible for directing the musical performance of a band. An example of conducting non-commissioned member (NCM) is the director of music, or bandmaster.
3. The drum major is the NCM responsible for leading the band on the march and for controlling the drill movements, and the musical action where it is not practical for a conductor or pipe major to do so of a band during parades.
4. When there are multiple drum majors on parade, one shall be formally appointed as the principal drum major, responsible to coordinate and control the actions of combined and massed bands and of the other drum majors, all of whom shall signal in unison.
