Operant Conditioning

What ways are the Law of Effect and the Operant Chamber ways of learning?

Skinner's Experiments

How are reinforcement and shaping similar?

Basic Forms of Learning

- OPERANT CONDITIONING is where organisms associate their own actions with consequences. Actions followed by reinforcers increase. Actions followed by punishers often decrease.
- E.T. Skinner's work elaborated on what Edward Thorndike called the LAW OF EFFECT: the principle that behaviors followed by favorable consequences become more likely, and that behaviors followed by unfavorable consequences become less likely.
- Skinner designed an OPERANT CHAMBER, known as the Skinner Box. The box has a bar (lever) that an animal presses or a key (disc) the animal pecks to release a reward of food or water.

Law of Effect

- REINFORCEMENT is in operant conditioning, any event that strengthens the behavior it follows.
- SHAPING is an operant conditioning procedure in which reinforcers guide behavior toward closer toward closer and closer approximations of the desired behavior. Choose a baseline behavior and guide the cat's actions toward the desired behavior.
- DISCRIMINATIVE STIMULUS is the operant conditioning, a stimulus that elicits a response after association with reinforcement.
