Return Migration from Canada and the United States Catherine Letitia Woodman Colby, 1998 This study analyzes the impact of labor migration on a Mixtec speaking sending community in the Mixteca Alta of Oaxaca Mexico It considers migrant destinations work experiences skills and techniques learned abroad and possibly applied in the sending community and remittances brought or sent home This study seeks to provide an increased theoretical understanding of the concept of a migration stream and then demonstrate that each migration stream is made of distinct characteristics which correspond to specific changes and ramifications in the sending community. The emphasis is on comparing international migration between Mexico and Canada through a guestworker program to migration to the United States with additional discussion of internal migration to Mexico City. Specifically, this project analyzes the impact of different types of migration on community political and religious structures on the lives of women on traditional artisan production on community agriculture and on perceptions of Mixtec culture and ethnicity. The ultimate goal of this research is a better understanding of how migration types are related to community change and ultimately community and regional perspectives of development and improvement in the quality of life. The analysis of the ramifications and potential benefits of migration on individuals and families dependent on migration in the Mixteca Alta has vital implications not only for future development in the Mixteca itself but also as a model for community development testing and application in similarly affected areas of Mexico and other countries. This study also provides perspectives on the benefits and challenges of international contract labor insights significant for immigration and labor policy planners worldwide.
