

OPERATIONS Management

INTRODUCTION

goods Tangible objects (e.g. produced by firms) (e.g., manufactured products, services, buildings). The combination of goods and services produced for a firm (e.g., for a restaurant dinner) is called the tangible mix and the intangible experience.

operations management (OM) The management of activities and processes that create and deliver goods and services, efficiently and effectively, for customers (product and process management is specifically used for the manufacturing of products). Planning and control The role of operations, that is, to plan the work (planning) and then make the plan work.

process A sequence of activities that transform inputs into outputs (the goods and services).

services Intangible acts or experiences produced by firms (e.g., health cleaning, repair, advice). The combination of activities and firms that together produce goods and services and deliver them to the end user or customer (e.g., creating intangible experiences, along with making other real, intangible manifestations, using time, place, technology, and other resources).

transformation Converting inputs (e.g., raw materials, components) into outputs (e.g., components).

value added The difference between the cost of the inputs and the price of the outputs, the value that is added to goods and services through a transformation.

GOALS OF OPERATIONS

• Quality: are insights for success are integrated.

• Costs: are minimized when products are produced.

• Operations are usually not directly involved in producing or manufacturing products that customers purchase, although they usually contribute to creating customer value.

• Services are produced and presented at the same time, whereas goods are manufactured and presented at a later point in time.

• Costs can be increased (e.g., when more resources cannot be leveraged).

• Services are generally produced closer to the customer (where they are consumed), whereas goods are produced further away from the customer.

• Services are usually more labor intensive, whereas goods production has relatively low labor content.

• Productivity is easier to measure in manufacturing than it is in services.

PROJECT MANAGEMENT

Projects are unique undertakings that have to be completed by a certain date, for a certain amount of money within an expected level of performance. A project manager's duty is to fulfill these three main competing goals:

• Scope goals: What is the project trying to accomplish?

• Time goals: How long should it take to accomplish?

• Cost goals: What should it cost?

Project managers are responsible for the planning, scheduling, and controlling of the project to fulfill these goals.

Activities The specific tasks that needs to be done in any project. It is a task, a project, made up of a variety of activities or tasks (activity flow in the form of tasks to get the activity or task done, that is usually undertaken in project).

Planning (Planning of completing activity flows, this is usually done by using additional resources to complete the project within the scheduled or set dates or when the project is behind schedule, by using tasks, flows, like "load test", available, or critical path" rule).

• Critical activities (all are available, the type of work involved can be specified).

• Critical path (the path on the critical path, since only this path projects duration).

• Critical tasks (the activity that is the most important, since that needs the most resources to complete for a short time, e.g., load test for user per day).

• Design (the sequence until the required project duration is achieved, the project cannot be started any more, or it's more important to reach the project deadline for the benefits of creating and resources under focus).
