Oceanography Lab Manual Lemke:

Oceanography and Marine Biology R. N. Gibson, Margaret Barnes, R. J. A. Atkinson, 2002-08-29 Interest in oceanography and marine biology and its relevance to global environmental issues continues to increase creating a demand for authoritative reviews that summarize recent research. Oceanography and Marine Biology An Annual Review has catered to this demand since its foundation by the late Harold Barnes more than 40 years ago. It is an Polar Remote Sensing Dan Lubin, Robert Massom, 2006-08-31 The polar regions perhaps more than any other places on Earth give the geophysical scientist a sense of exploration. This sensibility is genuine for not only is high latitude fieldwork arduous with many locations seldom or never visited but there remains much fundamental knowledge yet to be discovered about how the polar regions interact with the global climate system. The range of opportunities for new discovery becomes strikingly clear when we realize that the high latitudes are not one region but are really two vastly different worlds. The high Arctic is a frozen ocean surrounded by land and is home to fragile ecosystems and unique modes of human habitation. The Antarctic is a frozen continent without regular human habitation covered by ice sheets taller than many mountain ranges and surrounded by the Earth's most forbidding ocean. When we consider global change as applied to the Arctic we discuss impacts to a region whose surface and lower atmospheric temperatures are near the triple point of water throughout much of the year. The most consistent signatures of climate warming have occurred at northern high latitudes (IPCC 2001) and the potential impacts of a few degrees increase in surface temperature include a reduction in sea ice extent, a positive feedback to climate warming due to lowering of surface albedo and changes to surface runoff that might affect the Arctic Ocean's salinity and circulation.

Modelling the mass balance and salinity of Arctic and Antarctic sea ice Martin Vancoppenolle, 2008 Ice formed from seawater called sea ice is both an important actor in and a sensitive indicator of climate change. Covering 7% of the World Ocean, sea ice damps the atmosphere-ocean exchanges of heat, radiation and momentum in polar regions. It also affects the oceanic circulation at a global scale. Recent satellite and submarine observations systems indicate a sharp decrease in the extent and volume of Arctic sea ice over the last 30 years. In addition, climate models project drastic sea ice reductions for the next century in both hemispheres with potentially large consequences on climate and ecosystems. Contrary to what is commonly believed, sea ice retains about 25% of the oceanic salt when it forms. As salt cannot lock in the ice crystalline lattice, it accumulates in liquid inclusions of salty water brine. Under a temperature change, the inclusions freeze or melt and release or absorb huge amounts of latent heat. This affects heat transfer through and storage in sea ice, which may affect the mass balance of sea ice at a global scale. This is the central hypothesis of this work. In order to address this problem, the author develops two sea ice models and assesses their ability to simulate the recent evolution of the sea ice mass balance. Then the physics of brine uptake and drainage are included in the models and sea ice desalination is investigated. Finally, the impact of sea ice salinity variations on the global sea ice mass balance is studied. The roles of sea ice thermal properties of ice, ocean salt fresh water fluxes and of oceanic feedbacks are evaluated The new salinity module improves the simulation of ice and ocean characteristics compared to observations Including salinity variations increases ice growth reduces vertical mixing in the ocean and the ocean to ice heat flux In conclusion salinity variations should be included in future sea ice models used for climate projections Siberian River Run-off in the Kara Sea Stein Ruediger,2003 Within the joint German Russian research project Siberian River Run off SIRRO multidisciplinary studies were carried out in the Ob and Yenisei estuaries and adjacent southern Kara Sea Arctic Ocean The overall goal of the project was to extend knowledge on understanding the freshwater and sediment input by the major Siberian rivers and its impact on the environments of the inner Kara Sea The main results of oceanographical biological geochemical geological and modelling studies are presented in four main chapters

Computerized Modeling of Sedimentary Systems Jan Harff,Wolfram Lemke,Karl Stattegger,2013-03-14 Computerized modeling is a powerful tool to describe the complex interrelations between measured data and the dynamics of sedimentary systems Complex interaction of environmental factors with natural variations and increasing anthropogenic intervention is reflected in the sedimentary record at varying scales The understanding of these processes gives way to the reconstruction of the past and is a key to the prediction of future trends Especially in cases where observations are limited and or expensive computer simulations may substitute for the lack of data State of the art research work requires a thorough knowledge of processes at the interfaces between atmosphere hydrosphere biosphere and lithosphere and is therefore an interdisciplinary approach Annual Book of ASTM Standards American Society for Testing and Materials,2007 Polar Lows Erik A.
