Mismanagement Of Marine Fisheries:

Mismanagement of Marine Fisheries Alan R. Longhurst,2014-05-14 A critique of the central assumption that marine ecosystems produce surplus fish that can be taken by commercial fishing    Mismanagement of Marine Fisheries Alan Longhurst,2010-04-22 Longhurst examines the proposition central to fisheries science that a fishery creates its own natural resource by the compensatory growth it induces in the fish and that this is sustainable His novel analysis of the reproductive ecology of bony fish of cooler seas offers some support for this but a review of fisheries past and present confirms that sustainability is rarely achieved The relatively open structure and strong variability of marine ecosystems is discussed in relation to the reliability of resources used by the industrial level fishing that became globalised during the 20th century This was associated with an extraordinary lack of regulation in most seas and a widespread avoidance of regulation where it did exist Sustained fisheries can only be expected where social conditions permit strict regulation and where politicians have no personal interest in outcomes despite current enthusiasm for ecosystem based approaches or for transferable property rights

Dykstra,2008-08 This book reviews the fisheries of New England the poster child of mismanagement since 1977 It finds that many of the explanations offered for the New England problems are incorrect or irrelevant or counterproductive It suggests that the problems lie in two general categories first the legislative and administrative context of management and second and more serious fundamental issues concerning fishing technologies and lack of effective effort control strategies and an operational hypothesis of the dynamics of marine ecosystems These latter issues are not confined to New England but are inherent in most marine fisheries wherever they may be found The book suggests a new concept for benign and selective fishing technologies and it recommends a thorough review and analysis of the efficacy of effort control concepts It proposes a management strategy based upon the hierarchical concept of ecosystems
