Roblox Shooter For Kids:

Kids Across the Spectrums Meryl Alper,2023-08-15 An ethnographic study of diverse children on the autism spectrum and the role of media and technology in their everyday lives In spite of widespread assumptions that young people on the autism spectrum have a natural attraction to technology a premise that leads to significant speculation about how media helps or harms them relatively little research actually exists about their everyday tech use In Kids Across the Spectrums Meryl Alper fills this gap with the first book length ethnography of the digital lives of autistic young people Based on research with more than sixty neurodivergent children from an array of racial ethnic and socioeconomic backgrounds Kids Across the Spectrums delves into three overlapping areas of their media usage cultural belonging social relationships and physical embodiment Alper s work demonstrates that what autistic youth do with technology is not radically different from their non autistic peers However significant social and health inequalities including limited recreational programs unsafe neighborhoods and challenges obtaining appropriate therapeutic services spill over into their media habits With an emphasis on what autistic children bring to media as opposed to what they supposedly lack socially Alper argues that their relationships do not exist outside of how communication technologies affect sociality nor beyond the boundaries of stigmatization and society writ large Finally she offers practical suggestions for the education healthcare and technology sectors to promote equity inclusion access and justice for autistic kids at home at school and in their communities

Play in a Covid Frame Anna Beresin, Julia Bishop, 2023-06-01 During the international coronavirus lockdowns of 2020 2021 millions of children youth and adults found their usual play areas out of bounds and their friends out of reach. How did the pandemic restrict everyday play and how did the pandemic offer new spaces and new content? This unique collection of essays documents the ways in which communities around the world harnessed play within the limiting frame of Covid 19. Folklorists Anna Beresin and Julia Bishop adopt a multidisciplinary approach to this phenomenon bringing together the insights of a geographically and demographically diverse range of scholars practitioners and community activists. The book begins with a focus on social and physical landscapes before moving onto more intimate portraits of play among the old and young including coronavirus themed games and novel toy inventions. Finally the co authors explore the creative shifts observed in frames of play ranging from Zoom screens to street walls. This singular chronicle of coronavirus play will be of interest to researchers and students of developmental psychology childhood studies education playwork sociology anthropology and folklore as well as to toy museum and landscape designers. This book will also be of help to parents professional organizations educators and urban planners with a postscript of concrete suggestions advocating for the essential role of play in a post pandemic world.
