Crandall, Leonard Waverman, 1995 The rapid pace of technological change is placing the world's telephone companies in a very difficult position Fiber optics cables wireless telephones digital signal compression and sophisticated new switching equipment are lowering the cost of providing service and opening the gates to new competition At the same time these new technologies are providing the telephone companies with a wide array of new market opportunities Unfortunately their status as regulated carriers makes it difficult to exploit these new opportunities and to fend off competitive assaults on their traditional telephone business As long as they are regulated they can be accused of using their monopoly services to cross subsidize new competitive ventures But partial deregulation and open entry would be a catastrophe for them unless they were allowed to revise their rate structure There is a widespread misconception that the U S telecommunications industry has been deregulated and that Canadian authorities are following the U S lead In fact most services remain regulated even though some markets such as long distance services equipment sales and rentals and local services have been opened up This book reviews the recent changes in the structure of U S and Canadian telecommunications industries and the changes in regulatory policy on both sides of the border The authors analyze the effects of these changes in regulation on telephone rates in both the local and long distance markets with particular emphasis on the impacts of regulatory reforms and competition on long distance rates They use their results to suggest how regulation should be structured to allow competition to replace monopoly on the road to the information superhighway The authors contend that for decades misguided regulation of the telephone sector in both Canada and the U S denied consumers the benefits of competition distorted local and long distance telephone rates and blocked entry of new carriers and new technologies They warn that the continued regulation of the telecommunications industry could be responsible for slowing the transition from plain old telephone service to a telecommunications marketplace that offers a wide variety of services

They conclude by outlining the choices open to policymakers and calling for liberalized competition all along the information superhighway Engineering News ,1896 Congressional Record United States.
