What factors contribute to a long-run steady state and steady state can follow different transitional arrangements:

1. a steady-state level and threshold can be found where the growth rate of output growth is positive (they have to be equal) and the growth rate of the population growth rate is zero.
2. a steady-state level can be found by setting the growth rate of the growth rate of output to zero.
3. a steady-state level can be found by setting the growth rate of the growth rate of output to zero.
4. a steady-state level can be found by setting the growth rate of the growth rate of output to zero.

What are the main components of a long-run steady state?
