then portioning it out to grab and go meals for later. If you've ever had your leftovers from dinner to take with you for lunch, then next time you've had a mini meal prepped. Generally, though, meal prepping refers to preparing 3-7 days' worth of food at a time. Think of it like keeping your lunches for the week all at once instead of keeping your lunch hours running. You can use this same technique for breakfast, lunch, dinner, and snacks. Meal prepping isn't necessarily a waste and reduces time to the outside world, whether the plan is a diet or a budget. When keeping your next day's food, the question is, how long will you be able to eat homemade meals without having to do it each day? Most people don't do it, but everyone knows it's good for health, value, convenience, and more than anything else. With meal prepping, you generally eat the same thing for a few days in a row so you don't look at leftovers or get bored with food. Meal prepping isn't for you if having a variety of what you're maximizing your time and budget is more valuable to you than doing something different every day. Meal prepping is usually seen as a meal for the month or maybe one other person doing a whole month. Meal prepping for a whole family would be quite difficult, but the more people involved, the more it's a challenge. If food is stored in the refrigerator, it's a slow decline in quality. In addition to the way food is packed, the individual nuances of your refrigerator can impact the quality of your refrigerated meals. The length of time is acceptable, but the texture and flavor will be affected by the eater. Always begin with the refrigerator guidelines, but the FDA and then value them against your own preferences. In general, I don't think it's more than a few days' worth at a time, but I find that because of the food quality, it's not too long. My Meal Prep Recipe Planner Thriving Life Co., 2019-12-13.
