Multisensory Object Perception In The Primate Brain:

Multisensory Object Perception in the Primate Brain Marcus Johannes Naumer, Jochen Kaiser, 2010-07-03 It should come as no surprise to those interested in sensory processes that its research history is among the longest and richest of the many systematic efforts to understand how our bodies function. The continuing obsession with sensory systems is as much a reflection of the fundamental need to understand how we experience the physical world as it is to understand how we become who we are based on those very experiences. The senses function as both portal and teacher and their individual and collective properties have fascinated scientists and philosophers for millennia. In this context the attention directed toward specifying their properties on a sense by sense basis that dominated sensory research in the 20th century seems a prelude to our current preoccupation with how they function in concert. Nevertheless it was the concentrated effort on the operational principles of individual senses that provided the depth of understanding necessary to inform current efforts to reveal how they act cooperatively. We know that the information provided by any individual sensory modality is not always veridical but is subject to a myriad of modality specific distortions. Thus the brain's ability to compare across the senses and to integrate the information they provide is not only a way to examine the accuracy of any individual sensory channel but also a way to enhance the collective information they make available to the brain.

The New Handbook of Multisensory Processing Barry E. Stein, 2012-06-01 The major reference work for a rapidly advancing field synthesizes central themes, reports on current findings, and offers a blueprint for future research. Scientists' attempts to understand the physiology underlying our apprehension of the physical world was long dominated by a focus on the individual senses. The 1980s saw the beginning of systematic efforts to examine interactions among different sensory modalities at the level of the single neuron. And by the end of the 1990s a recognizable and multidisciplinary field of multisensory processes had emerged. More recently, studies involving both human and nonhuman subjects have focused on relationships among multisensory neuronal ensembles and their behavioral, perceptual, and cognitive correlates. The New Handbook of Multisensory Processing synthesizes the central themes in this rapidly developing area, reports on current findings, and offers a blueprint for future research. The contributions, all of them written for this volume by leading experts, reflect the evolution and current state of the field. This handbook does more than simply review the field. Each of the volume's eleven sections broadly surveys a major topic and each begins with a substantive and thought-provoking commentary by the section editor that identifies the major issues being explored, describes their treatment in the chapters that follow, and sets these findings within the context of the existing body of knowledge. Together the commentaries and chapters provide an invaluable guide to areas of general agreement, unresolved issues, and topics that remain to be explored in this fast-moving field.

Handbook of Psychology, Experimental Psychology Irving B. Weiner, Alice F.

Healy, Robert W. Proctor, 2012-10-05 Psychology is of interest to academics from many fields as well as to the thousands of academic and clinical psychologists and general public who can't help but be interested in learning more about why humans think and behave as they do. This award winning twelve volume reference covers every aspect of the ever fascinating discipline of psychology and represents the most current knowledge in the field. This ten year revision now covers discoveries based in neuroscience, clinical psychology, a new interest in evidence based practice and mindfulness, and new findings in social, developmental, and forensic psychology.

Time Distortions in Mind, 2015-07-14 Time Distortions in Mind brings together current research on aspects of temporal processing in clinical populations in the ultimate hope of elucidating the interdependence between perturbations in timing and disturbances in the mind and brain. Such research may inform not only typical psychological functioning but may also elucidate the psychological consequences of any pathophysiological differences in temporal processing. This collection of current knowledge on temporal processing in clinical populations is an excellent reference for the student and scientist interested in the topic but it also serves as the stepping stone to share ideas and push forward the advancement in understanding how distorted timing can lead to a disturbed brain and mind or vice versa. Contributors to this volume: Ryan D Ward, Billur Avlar, Peter D Balsam, Deana B Davalos, Jamie Opper, Yvonne Delevoye-Turrell, Hélène Wilquin, Mariama Dione, Anne Giersch, Laurence Lalanne, Mitsouko van Assche, Patrick E Poncelet, Mark A Elliott, Deborah L Harrington, Stephen M Rao, Catherine R G Jones, Marjan Jahanshahi, Bon Mi Gu, Anita J Jurkowski, Jessica I Lake, Chara Malapani, Warren H Meck, Rebecca M C Spencer, Dawn Wimpory, Brad Nicholas, Elzbieta Szelag, Aneta Szymaszek, Anna Oron, Melissa J Allman, Christine M Falter, Argiro Vatakis, Alexandra Elissavet Bakou.

The First Sense, Matthew Fulkerson, 2013-12-06 An empirically informed philosophical account of human touch as a single unified sensory modality that plays a central role in perception. It is through touch that we are able to interact directly with the world; it is our primary conduit of both pleasure and pain. Touch may be our most immediate and powerful sense, the first sense because of the central role it plays in experience. In this book, Matthew Fulkerson proposes that human touch, despite its functional diversity, is a single unified sensory modality. Fulkerson offers a philosophical account of touch reflecting the interests, methods, and approach that define contemporary philosophy, but his argument is informed throughout by the insights and constraints of empirical work on touch. Human touch is a multidimensional object of investigation. Fulkerson writes best served by using a variety of methods and approaches. To defend his view of the unity of touch, Fulkerson describes and argues for a novel unifying role for exploratory action in touch. He goes on to fill in the details of this unified exploratory form of perception, offering philosophical accounts of tool use and distal touch, the representational structure of tangible properties, the spatial content of touch, and the role of pleasure in tactile experience. Fulkerson's argument for the unique role played by exploratory action departs notably from traditional vision centric philosophical approaches to perception, challenging the received view that action plays the same role in all sensory modalities. The robust philosophical account of touch he offers in
