20ppm/multifunctional

Sum-up: Upgraded copier multifunctionals for small workgroups.

These compact LED-based models offer strong functionality. The MFX-2030 and MFX-2050 run at 20ppm and offer good multifunctionality out of the box, including copying, printing, scanning, and faxing as standard functions. Both models also support duplex output and have a user-friendly touch-screen interface.

It looks as though the MFX-2050 is in line to replace the older MFX-2030, since they share identical general specifications and are listed at the same price ($3,495).

Take note, however, that these models do differ in ways that may be significant to you. The MFX-2050's capabilities are enhanced with regard to the number of address book and folder locations that can be stored, the availability of secure printing, the inclusion of specific scan-to locations, the level of network authentication, and the bundling of other administrative and security options. In some instances, software updates can raise the MFX-2030's capability to the standard level of the MFX-2050's feature set. However, this is not universally true, and the MFX-2050 appears to be the better model, especially if you have security concerns. In many situations the MFX-2030 is still perfectly adequate, and you may be able to negotiate a better price for the older model.

Paper handling on the machines is pretty good. A standard 500-sheet paper tray and a 50-sheet bypass come in the box, and Muratec sells an optional 500-sheet tray for $330. The document feeder holds up to 80 sheets, good at this level of the market. As we noted earlier, both models support standard automatic duplexing.

The standard printing function makes use of Windows GDI technology, using 600dpi resolution. You can upgrade to a 600MHz controller that supports PCL printing for $550. Connectivity is through both Ethernet and USB ports.

Scanning, in grayscale or color, supports both scanning across the network and scan-to-email. Scan-to-email is not always a standard feature in low-volume copier-multifunctionals. Support for LDAP and Microsoft Active Directory are standard.

Not surprising for a Muratec model, the fax function is quite strong. The standard faxing uses a 33.6kbps modem that includesJBIG compression. These units come standard with 630MB of fax memory, which can be expanded to 3,370 pages. Incoming faxes can be routed to email.
