Other Strategic Planning Approaches In addition to the approaches described above, other strategic planning approaches have been developed to complement the traditional strategic planning process. One approach is the Strategic Planning Grid, developed by the Center for Creative Leadership. This approach is based on the work of management consultant Peter F. Drucker, who developed the concept of core competencies—the unique strengths of an organization. The grid approach identifies the organization's core competencies and then maps them against the organization's mission and vision. This approach can help organizations identify their strengths and weaknesses and develop strategies to capitalize on their strengths and mitigate their weaknesses. Another approach is the Strategic Planning Canvas, developed by the Harvard Business School. This approach uses a canvas to map out the organization's mission, vision, and core competencies, and then identifies opportunities and threats that may affect the organization. This approach can help organizations identify their strengths and weaknesses and develop strategies to capitalize on their strengths and mitigate their weaknesses.
