quest to improve our psychiatric diagnostic system we are now searching for new approaches to understanding the etiological and pathophysiological mechanisms that can improve the validity of our diagnoses and the consequent power of our preventive and treatment interventions venturing beyond the current DSM paradigm and DSM IV framework This thought provoking volume produced as a partnership between the American Psychiatric Association the National Institute of Mental Health the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism and the National Institute on Drug Abuse represents a far reaching attempt to stimulate research and discussion in the field in preparation for the eventual start of the DSM V process still several years hence The book Explores a variety of basic nomenclature issues including the desirability of rating the quality and quantity of information available to support the different disorders in the DSM in order to indicate the disparity of empirical support across the diagnostic system Offers a neuroscience research agenda to guide development of a pathophysiologically based classification for DSM V which reviews genetic brain imaging postmortem and animal model research and includes strategic insights for a new research agenda Presents highlights of recent progress in developmental neuroscience genetics psychology psychopathology and epidemiology using a bioecological perspective to focus on the first two decades of life when rapid changes in behavior emotion and cognition occur Discusses how to address two important gaps in the current DSM IV 1 the categorical method of diagnosing personality disorders and their relationship with Axis I disorders and 2 the limited provision for the diagnosis of relational disorders suggesting a research agenda for personality disorders that considers replacing the current categorical approach with a dimensional classification of personality Reevaluates the relationship between mental disorders and disability asserting that research into disability and impairment would benefit from the diagnosis of mental disorders be uncoupled from a requirement for impairment or disability to foster a more vigorous research agenda on the etiologies courses and treatment of mental disorders as well as disabilities and to avert unintended consequences of delayed diagnosis and treatment Examines the importance of culture in psychopathology and the main cultural variables at play in the diagnostic process stating that training present and future professionals in the need to include cultural factors in the diagnostic process is a logical step in any attempt to develop comprehensive research programs in psychology psychiatry and related disciplines This fascinating work with contributions from an international group of research investigators reaches into the core of psychiatry providing invaluable background and insights for all psychology and psychiatry professionals food for thought and further research that will be relevant for years to come

Dimensional Models of Personality Disorders Thomas A. Widiger,Paul J. Sirovatka,Darrel A. Regier,Erik Simonsen,2007-05-03 DSM IV and ICD 10 both diagnose personality disorders categorically yet studies indicate that many patients meet criteria for an excessive number of diagnoses raising the question of whether personality disorders are discrete conditions or rather distinctions along dimensions of general personality functioning This collection of papers renews long standing proposals for a dimensional model of personality disorder describing alternative models addressing questions about their clinical application and utility and suggesting that future research seek to integrate such models within a common hierarchical structure With contributions by preeminent researchers in the field Dimensional Models of Personality Disorders is drawn from a conference series convened by APA WHO and NIH in order to plan for the fifth edition of the DSM The Nomenclature Work Group concluded that consideration should be given to basing part or all of DSM V on dimensions rather than categories and recommended that a dimensional model for personality disorders should serve as a basis for exploring dimensional approaches in other areas Accordingly the volume opens with a presentation of 18 proposals for dimensional models and proceeds with provocative contributions on a number of related issues ranging from hard science to clinical practice Among the topics addressed are Behavioral and molecular genetic research supporting an etiologically informed dimensional classification of personality disorders The as yet tenuous associations between dimensional trait measures of personality as contained in the models of Cloninger Depue and Siever Davis and specific neurobiological measures as examined in neurotransmitter research Potential links between childhood and adolescent temperament and personality dimensions and adult personality psychopathology Studies examining the covariation of personality dimensions across cultures The continuity of Axis I and Axis II disorders and a proposed hierarchical structure of mental disorders that integrates the psychopathology of Axis I disorders with specific personality traits The dual challenges of coverage and cutoffs that must be addressed if dimensional models are to be considered viable alternatives to the existing categorical diagnostic system Although the editors acknowledge that concerns are certain to be raised regarding conversion to a dimensional classification such as the disruption to clinical practice by a radical shift in diagnosing personality disorder these papers make a strong case for opening the field to alternative ways of enhancing clinical utility and improving the validity of basic classification concepts Together they offer stimulating insight into how we approach personality disorders with the hope of encouraging a new model of diagnosis for DSM V
