A bold restorative vision of Mozart s works and Western art music generally as manifestations of an idealism rooted in the sociable nature of humans WINNER 2019 Marjorie Weston Emerson Award from the Mozart Society of America For over a generation now many leading performers critics and scholars of Mozart s music have taken a rejection of transcendence as axiomatic This essentially modernist antiromantic orientation attempts to neutralize the sorts of aesthetic experiences that presuppose an enchantment with Mozart s art an engagement traditionally articulated by such terms as intention mimesis author and genius And what is true of much recent Mozart interpretation is often manifest in the interpretation of Western art music more generally Edmund Goehring s Coming to Terms with Our Musical Past explores what gets lost when the vocabulary of enchantment is abandoned The book then proceeds to offer an alternative vision of Mozart s works and of the wider canon of Western art music A modernized poetics Goehring argues reduces art to mechanism or process It sees less because it excludes a necessary and enlarging human presence the generative and receiving I This fascinating new book length essay is addressed to any reader interested in the performing arts visual arts and literature and their relationship to the broader culture Goehring draws on seminal thinkers in art criticism and philosophy to propose that such works as Mozart s radiate an idealism that has human sociability both as its source and its object This book is available as an Open Access eBook under the Creative Commons license CC BY NC

Dominique Nasta,1991 Understanding how meaning mechanisms are unleashed in film has been at the center of numerous theoretical surveys of the last few years Emphasis has especially fallen on seeing as a constructive meaningful activity and on the diegetic implications of vision This book is an attempt to extend film theorizing into a new realm where hearing proves as important as seeing and where the relevance of filmic narrative is differently explored New paths for future research are suggested by means of associations with the works of linguists or philosophers who have never addressed film theory directly in their writings Nonetheless several concepts posited by them relevance natural versus non natural meaning or the notion of Mental spaces find their application in the present survey A wide range of examples starting with point of view and editing occurrences passing through the use of music and sound and culminating with the study of whole filmic ensembles enables the reader to re examine code bound or on the contrary deviational structures These are often drawn from familiar sources proving that not only art films of the Eisenstein or Godard type enhance innovative meaning spaces Finally the viewer is seen as a pragmatic protagonist an active not passive receiver of textual structures who relies on patterns of known visual or aural backgrounds open to an unlimited field of perspectives Telos ,1977 Choice ,1992
