Clearing the Smoke Institute of Medicine, Board on Health Promotion and Disease Prevention, Committee to Assess the Science Base for Tobacco Harm Reduction, 2001-10-17 Despite overwhelming evidence of tobacco's harmful effects and pressure from anti-smoking advocates, current surveys show that about one quarter of all adults in the United States are smokers. This audience is the target for a wave of tobacco products and pharmaceuticals that claim to preserve tobacco pleasure while reducing its toxic effects. Clearing the Smoke addresses the problems in evaluating whether such products actually do reduce the health risks of tobacco use. Within the context of regulating such products, the committee explores key questions: Does the use of such products decrease exposure to harmful substances in tobacco? Is decreased exposure associated with decreased harm to health? Are there surrogate indicators of harm that could be measured quickly enough for regulation of these products? What are the public health implications? This book looks at the types of products that could reduce harm and reviews the available evidence for their impact on various forms of cancer and other major ailments. It also recommends approaches to governing these products and tracking their public health effects. With an attitude of healthy skepticism, Clearing the Smoke will be important to health policy makers, public health officials, medical practitioners, manufacturers, and marketers of reduced harm tobacco products, and anyone trying to sort through product claims.

Clearing the smokescreen: The current evidence on cannabis use Elizabeth C. Temple, Richard Hammersley, Margriet van Laar, Rhonda F. Brown, 2015-05-08 Cannabis remains the most commonly used illicit substance worldwide, with international estimates indicating that 2.8% to 4.5% of the global population use cannabis each year. This prevalence rate has not changed substantially in the past decade and there is no indication that it will do so in the next decade. In line with this, many prominent organizations and individuals have acknowledged that the war on drugs has failed and are now calling for a rethink on drug-related policy and legal frameworks. With a growing number of jurisdictions across the world heeding this call and introducing legislation to decriminalize or legalize cannabis use, it is essential that any changes to legal frameworks and public health policies are based on the best available scientific evidence. To facilitate the adoption of an evidence-based approach to cannabis policy, the aim of this Research Topic was to gather a comprehensive body of research to clarify the current state of evidence relating to cannabis use. Of interest were articles addressing the following questions: How do we study cannabis use, e.g., recruitment, measuring dose, use, assessing dependence, problematic use, confounding, translation of findings from animal studies? What do we know about cannabis use, e.g., patterns, contexts, methods of use? What do we know about people who use cannabis, e.g., who uses cannabis and why? What are the social settings, norms, and cultural values that go along with cannabis use? How is problematic cannabis use as opposed to mere use defined, judged, and constructed in different societies? What do we know about the effects/outcomes of cannabis use, e.g., acute, short- and long-term harms/benefits? What do we know about the factors associated with the initiation, continuance, and cessation of cannabis use? What do we know about
