generations to enjoy The OLD ADAM by ARNOLD BENNETT Enoch Arnold Bennett,2016-06-14 And yet Edward Henry Machin reflected as at six minutes to six he approached his own dwelling at the top of Bleakridge and yet I don t feel so jolly after all The first two words of this disturbing meditation had reference to the fact that by telephoning twice to his stockbrokers at Manchester he had just made the sum of three hundred and forty one pounds in a purely speculative transaction concerning Rubber shares It was in the autumn of the great gambling year 1910 He had simply opened his lucky and wise mouth at the proper moment and the money like ripe golden fruit had fallen into it a gift from benign Heaven surely a cause for happiness And yet he did not feel so jolly He was surprised he was even a little hurt to discover by introspection that monetary gain was not necessarily accompanied by felicity Nevertheless this very successful man of the world of the Five Towns having been born on the 27th of May 1867 had reached the age of forty three and a half years I must be getting older he reflected He was right He was still young as every man of forty three will agree but he was getting older A few years ago a windfall of Three hundred and forty one pounds would not have been followed by morbid self analysis it would have been followed by unreasoning instinctive elation which elation would have endured at least twelve hours As he disappeared within the reddish garden wall which sheltered his abode from the publicity of Trafalgar Road he half hoped to see Nellie waiting for him on the famous marble step of the porch for the woman had long long since invented a way of scouting for his advent from the small window in the bathroom But there was nobody on the marble step His melancholy increased At the midday meal he had complained of neuralgia and hence this was an evening upon which he might fairly have expected to see sympathy charmingly attired on the porch It is true that the neuralgia had completely gone Still he said to himself with justifiable sardonic gloom how does she know my neuralgia s gone She doesn t know Having opened the front door with the thinnest neatest latchkey in the Five Towns he entered his home and stumbled slightly over a brush that was lying against the sunk door mat He gazed at that brush with resentment It was a dilapidated handbrush The offensive object would have been out of place at nightfall in the lobby of any house But in the lobby of his house the house which he had planned a dozen years earlier to the special end of minimising domestic labour and which he had always kept up to date with the latest devices in his lobby the spectacle of a vile outworn hand brush at tea time amounted to a scandal Less than a fortnight previously he had purchased and presented to his wife a marvellous electric vacuum cleaner surpassing all former vacuum cleaners You simply attached this machine by a cord to the wall like a dog and waved it in mysterious passes over the floor like a fan and the house was clean He was as proud of this machine as though he had invented it instead of having merely bought it every day he enquired about its feats expecting enthusiastic replies as a sort of reward for his own keenness and be it said that he had had enthusiastic replies And now this obscene hand brush As he carefully removed his hat and his beautiful new Melton overcoat which had the colour and the soft smoothness of a damson he animadverted upon the astounding negligence of women There were Nellie his wife his mother the nurse the cook the maid five of them and in his mind they had all plotted together a conspiracy of carelessness to leave the inexcusable tool in his lobby for him to stumble over What was the use of accidentally procuring three hundred and forty one pounds Still no sign of Nellie though he purposely made a noisy rattle with his ebon walking stick     The Old Adam Arnold Bennett,2013-09 This is a reproduction of a book published before 1923 This book may have occasional imperfections such as missing or blurred pages poor pictures errant marks etc that were either part of the original artifact or were introduced by the scanning process We believe this work is culturally important and despite the imperfections have elected to bring it back into print as part of our continuing commitment to the preservation of printed works worldwide We appreciate your understanding of the imperfections in the preservation process and hope you enjoy this valuable book     The Old Adam Arnold Bennett,2018-02-02 Excerpt from The Old Adam A Story of Adventure As he carefully removed his hat and his beautiful new Melton overcoat which had the colour and the soft smoothness of a damson he animadverted upon the astounding negligence of women There were Nellie his wife his mother the nurse the cook the maid five of them and in his mind they had all plotted together a conspiracy of carelessness to leave the inexcusable tool in his lobby for him to stumble over What was the use of accidentally procuring three hundred and forty one pounds Still no Sign of Nellie though he purposely made a noisy rattle with his ebon walking stick Then the maid burst out of the kitchen with a tray and the principal utensils for high tea thereon She had a guilty air The household was evidently late Two steps at a time he rushed upstairs to the bathroom so as to be waiting in the dining room at Six precisely in order if possible to shame the household and fill it with remorse and unpleasantness Yet ordinarily he was not a very prompt man nor did he delight in giving pain On the contrary he was apt to be casual blithe and agreeable About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
