Multiperson Decision Making Models Using Fuzzy Sets and Possibility Theory J. Kacprzyk,Mario Fedrizzi,2012-12-06 Decision making is certainly a very crucial component of many human activities It is therefore not surprising that models of decisions play a very important role not only in decision theory but also in areas such as operations Research Management science social Psychology etc The basic model of a decision in classical normative decision theory has very little in common with real decision making It portrays a decision as a clear cut act of choice performed by one individual decision maker and in which states of nature possible actions results and preferences are well and crisply defined The only component in which uncertainty is permitted is the occurrence of the different states of nature for which probabilistic descriptions are allowed These probabilities are generally assumed to be known numerically i e as single probabilities or as probability distribution functions Extensions of this basic model can primarily be conceived in three directions 1 Rather than a single decision maker there are several decision makers involved This has lead to the areas of game theory team theory and group decision theory 2 The preference or utility function is not single valued but rather vector valued This extension is considered in multiattribute utility theory and in multicriteria analysis 3

Models of Decision-Making Paul Weirich,2015-02-05 Classical decision theory evaluates entire worlds specified so as to include everything a decision maker cares about Thus applying decision theory requires performing computations far beyond an ordinary decision maker's ability In this book Paul Weirich explains how individuals can simplify and streamline their choices He shows how different parts of options intrinsic temporal spatiotemporal causal are separable so that we can know what difference one part makes to the value of an option regardless of what happens in the other parts He suggests that the primary value of options is found in basic intrinsic attitudes towards outcomes desires aversions or indifferences And using these two facts he argues that we need only compare small parts of the options we face in order to make a rational decision This important book will interest readers in decision theory economics and the behavioral sciences Human-Centric Decision-Making Models for Social Sciences Peijun Guo,Witold Pedrycz,2013-11-01

Diffusion Process Models of Decision Making: Volume 1 Philip L. Smith, Roger Ratcliff, 2025-10-31 Diffusion decision models are widely used to characterize the cognitive and neural processes involved in making rapid decisions about objects and events in the environment. These decisions which are made hundreds of times a day without prolonged deliberation include recognition of people and things as well as real time decisions made while walking or driving. Diffusion models assume that the processes involved in making such decisions are noisy and variable and that noisy evidence is accumulated until there is enough for a decision. This volume provides the first comprehensive treatment of the theory mathematical foundations numerical methods and empirical applications of diffusion process models in psychology and neuroscience. In addition to the standard Wiener diffusion model readers will find a detailed unified treatment of the cognitive theory and the neural foundations of a variety of dynamic diffusion process models of two choice multiple choice and continuous outcome decisions.

Decision Making, Models and Algorithms Saul I. Gass, 1985-05-10 The first book to integrate the decision making process through mathematical modelling. Using the concept of a decision framework the ideas of decision making models and algorithms are introduced to the reader by way of realistic and entertaining problems. The structure form illustrations problems and challenges in this book provide a unique presentation of the subject matter.

Dynamics of decision making: from evidence to preference and belief Erica Yu, David A. Lagnado, 2014-10-24 At the core of the many debates throughout cognitive science concerning how decisions are made are the processes governing the time course of preference formation and decision. From perceptual choices such as whether the signal on a radar screen indicates an enemy missile or a spot on a CT scan indicates a tumor to cognitive value based decisions such as selecting an agreeable flatmate or deciding the guilt of a defendant significant and everyday decisions are dynamic over time. Phenomena such as decoy effects, preference reversals and order effects are still puzzling researchers. For example in a legal context jurors receive discrete pieces of evidence in sequence and must integrate these pieces together to reach a singular verdict. From a standard Bayesian viewpoint the order in which people receive the evidence should not influence their final decision and yet order effects seem a robust empirical phenomena in many decision contexts. Current research on how decisions unfold especially in a dynamic environment is advancing our theoretical understanding of decision making. This Research Topic aims to review and further explore the time course of a decision from how prior beliefs are formed to how those beliefs are used and updated over time towards the formation of preferences and choices and post decision processes and effects. Research literatures encompassing varied approaches to the time scale of decisions will be brought into scope. Speeded decisions and post decision processes that require the accumulation of noisy and possibly non stationary perceptual evidence e.g. randomly moving dots stimuli within a few seconds with or without temporal uncertainty b. Temporally extended value based decisions that integrate feedback values e.g. gambling machines and internally generated decision criteria e.g. when one switches attention selectively between the various aspects of several choice alternatives c Temporally extended belief based decisions that build on the integration of evidence which interacts with the decision maker s belief system towards the updating of the beliefs and the formation of judgments and preferences as in the legal context Research that emphasizes theoretical concerns including optimality analysis and mechanisms underlying the decision process both neural and cognitive is presented as well as research that combines experimental and computational levels of analysis
