Oakwell Celebrates St. Patrick's Day

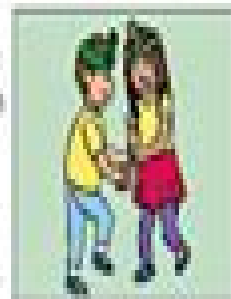

Last weekend, Oakwell held its annual St. Patrick's Day parade and carnival. Members from the Irish community in Oakwell organised this event and invited the wider community to mark the anniversary of St. Patrick's death in 461 on 17th March.

Who was St. Patrick?

St. Patrick is the patron saint of Ireland and he introduced Christianity to the country. In Irish mythology, it is believed that St. Patrick drove snakes out of the country, although many believe the animals never actually inhabited Ireland. The word always takes place on the second Saturday in the month of March.

The children also danced with a water-themed Irish (pronounced 'begley') - a dance to Irish or Scottish folk music. This display caused awe and wonder among visitors. Local Headteacher Mrs. West said of the Irish dance, "It was fantastic! The pupils of Oakwell should be very proud of themselves. I will be humming the tune from their performance for weeks to come."

Food stalls offered up a range of authentic dishes, including Irish stew served with wild trout, salmon and Irish apple cake. The apple cakes were so popular that only a few crumbs were left! Oakwell resident Karen Verma said "It was the nicest cake I have ever tasted."
