COVER LETTER

Spotify has had a big impact on my daily life since it was released. The application is always running in the background when I train, work or relax. I feel that Spotify always contributes something to my days, independently of what I'm currently up to. When I develop software, I want to feel that I help create a better everyday life for many people, which I believe Spotify does, and that's why I'm writing this application.

I am a humble developer. I strive to keep my code transparent and easy to understand. To enable more people to be involved in what I create and also question my code. To come up with the best possible solution, I believe that continuous feedback is the key to success and the way to go. I think this fits well with how Spotify describes the way of working, which I believe I could contribute to.

When I develop, I always strive to make the code more efficient and easy to manage. I'm a doer rather than a questioner. When I code, I start by doing and learn from what I observe. I think this will make me fit well in a company like Spotify, where you value people who are innovating, taking risks, and where people have no fear of failure.

I would be delighted to discuss the various ways in which I could contribute to your team, and I look forward to hearing from you.

Kind regards,
Richard Holder

Organizations such as the Sierra Club and Friends of the Earth are familiar to anyone with an interest in environmental protection. As activist groups they played by the same rules for years. But in 1994 the rules changed. With the Republican takeover of Congress, environmental groups faced sweeping changes in federal policies that threatened the enforcement of environmental laws. As these organizations intensified their efforts to meet these challenges, they also altered their electoral strategies and political spending patterns. This book traces those actions and shows what they mean for the future of environmentalism in the political arena. While environmental advocacy groups have become bigger and better funded in recent years, so have the corporate interests that compete with them for the attention of public and politicians. The Green Agenda in American Politics offers a new look at environmental advocacy that focuses on contemporary lobbying, electioneering, and agenda setting in this new context. Drawing on interviews with activists from a wide range of organizations, Robert Duffy describes what environmental groups actually do when lobbying officials or the public. He examines activity at both national and state levels to emphasize their growing use of websites, email, and action alert networks to conduct more sophisticated grassroots campaigns, and he shows how they are devoting more funds to unregulated forms of spending such as independent expenditure, issue advocacy, advertising, and public education campaigns. Duffy also tracks emerging trends in interest group politics and provides an overview of activism through the early 1990s. He then documents the emergence of more aggressive action after 1994, such as providing campaign services to candidates and mounting voter registration drives. He also shows how state and local groups have begun to play more important roles in the wake of the rollback of federal environmental regulations. Brimming with new insights into interest group lobbies in general and contemporary environmental groups in particular, Duffy's book opens a new window on the influence of Big Money in the supposedly democratic electoral process.
