

Chapter 10: Macroeconomic Policy: Government and Legislation

Compare the role of the Federal Reserve, the Federal Reserve Act (1913) and explain the monetary policy instrument.

Question 1

1. List four forward and four backward specifications for a demand of Congress today (year 2018 or 2019 years ago). Do you think the backward specifications are relevant and more probable than the forward specifications? Why or why not?

Forward specifications consider all the cases which occurred, i.e., which has at least 17 years (forward) or 19 years (backward), at least 20 (forward) or 22 (backward) years.

2. Finally, do you agree the forward and backward specifications with backward specifications change the significance of the year? Then, describe the process that demonstrates why your choice is better or worse.

Every 20 years, a national census is conducted, and results are used to calculate the allocation of House seats. States with a large increase in population may gain more seats, while states with a large decrease in population may lose seats. The census also determines the number of representatives each state has in the House.

3. Explain the difference between a delegate and a trustee. Which do you think makes more effective legislation and why?

Delegates are representatives who are elected to represent the interests of their constituents. Trustees are representatives who are elected to represent the interests of the nation as a whole. Delegates are more likely to be responsive to the needs of their constituents, while trustees are more likely to be responsive to the needs of the nation as a whole.

4. Which do you think is more effective in making legislation? Is it possible to explain the difference between the two?

Question 2

1. Why do legislative positions in Congress have the most power? List some specific powers of these positions.

The House of Representatives has the most power in Congress. The House has the power to impeach and remove federal judges and officials, and to declare war. The House also has the power to pass legislation, and to control the federal budget.
