

NUMB3RS Activity: Code Crackers Episode: "Assassin"

Topic: Simple Codes

Grade Level: 6-12

Objective: Making and breaking codes

Time: about 15 minutes

Introduction

Codes have been used for centuries as a way to communicate in secret. In order for codes to work, you need code makers (cryptologists) and where there are code makers, there are often code breakers (cryptanalysts). There have been many famous codes: some very simple, such as the Caesar substitution cipher (seen below); some very complex, such as RSA encryption which utilizes very large prime numbers and is widely used in electronic commerce. Advanced codes employ the best minds and computer systems in the world.

Discuss with Students

In "Assassin," Agent Don Eppes has intercepted a coded message that he brings to his brother, Charlie, for decrypting. Charlie recognizes the code as a cipher (a code that substitutes letters for other letters or small groups of letters), and realizes that a computer is not needed to break it. An example of a simple cipher is below.

Introduce making a code with a key. In the example below, the key shows what each letter will be replaced with. If you know the key, you can write in the code and read anything written in it. When you replace, or "substitute" a letter, you are using substitution.

For example, in this key, the alphabet has been shifted 9 places. Instead of communicating the entire alphabet shift to someone, you could simply give them a number as the key. The key for this code is 9.

A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H	I	J	K	L	M	N	O	P	Q	R	S	T	U	V	W	X	Y	Z
R	S	T	U	V	W	X	Y	Z	A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H	I	J	K	L	M	N	O	P	Q

- Using the above key, 9, decode the following message:
YVGG DVI LIFE. [HELP ME DOW]
- What letter appears more than once in the coded message above?
[M] To what uncoded letter does it correspond? [E]

Identifying common letters and words can be used to help break codes. "E" is the most commonly used English letter, followed by "A", "O" and "T". With long messages, you can count each coded letter and make educated guesses about what they stand for.

Student Page Answers: 1. After one night at prison place to be named 2. Getty Center east entrance 3. 25; then it repeats 4. Try each of the 25 keys or look for used letters for a clue.
5. a. Key of 21; b. Key of 41, 57, and 23 6. a. answers may vary; possible answer: assign letters randomly instead of in order b. answers will vary; possible answer: the receiver would need the entire alphabet and which letter went with which.
