Medical Dictionary Elizabeth A. Martin,2005 Clinical and Experimental Rheumatology ,1997 Science Citation Index ,1993 Vols for 1964 have guides and journal lists CBD Oil for Costochondritis: Therapeutic Guide for the Treatment of Upper Ribs Inflammation Dr Karl Burmer,2019-03-16 Cannabidiol CBD oil is a well known product that originates from cannabis CBD is a cannabis compound that has significant medical benefits but no psychoactive effects meaning that it does not make users high The fact that CBD is non psychoactive makes it an appealing option for patients looking for relief from inflammation anxiety pain and of course nausea to name just a few While there is still some controversy surrounding cannabis and products like CBD oil the awareness around the various health benefits that CBD has to offer is growing rapidly CBD can be found in a number of forms including capsules liquid oil salves creams tinctures sublingual supplements sprays oils as a paste and in edible forms such as CBD Gummies or sweets You also have the option to inhale CBD oil from vapor releasing pens similar to the technology for e cigarettes The variation in the number of methods used to consume CBD Oil means that there is a lot of controlled flexibility concerning concentration This makes CBD Oil useful for people of all ages for whatever personal needs While CBD does not have any major side effects it is important to note that there is the possibility of side effects such as dizziness low blood pressure or withdrawal symptoms such as irritability Therefore it is extremely important to consult with your primary physician before you decide to go down the CBD route Many people make the mistake of assuming that CBD Oil and Hemp Oil are the same thing In actual fact that is far from the truth Although CBD can also come from hemp and neither of the two have psychoactive effects CBD and Hemp Oil are derived from different parts of the plant and have different purposes CBD is a compound found in hemp flowers and extractors try to pull as much of it from the plant matter as they can and then purify it Typically extractors will select strains of the plant that are known to have higher CBD levels with the purpose of maximizing the end product The end result is an oil that is rich in CBD and low in THC which makes it perfect for those seeking the benefits of marijuana with none of the psychoactive effects CBD Oil has been known to help treat epilepsy and psychological problems act as an anti inflammatory and even aid in cancer treatment Because production methods vary and some producers use cannabis instead of hemp to produce the oil there are products out there that contain both CBD and THC However the amount of THC in these products is strictly limited and reflects doses and concentrations permitted by pharmaceutical standards Hemp Oil on the other hand is normally derived from the seeds of the plant The seeds contain as much as 50% of their weight in oil and the oil is then made by pressing the seeds to extract the fatty oils from within The seeds contain very little CBD not nearly enough to take advantage of its medicinal properties and only trace amounts of THC Unlike CBD Oil Hemp Oil has a strong nutritional value because it is high in polyunsaturated fats like Omega 3 Omega 6 and Vitamin E For this reason and the fact that it is low in saturated fats compared to other oils Hemp Oil has found a spot in many people s kitchens It often has a nutty to grassy flavour and high quality brands can be used for salad dressing and cooking Also due to its high vitamin E content Hemp Oil can also be found in numerous health products such as soap shampoo and skin conditioner It can be concluded that there is a very important underlying difference between these two oils CBD Oil is used for medicinal purpose while Hemp Oil is used for its nutritional value

CBD Oil for Costochondritis: Your Guide to the Treatment of Upper Ribs Inflammation Using CBD Oil Dr Tom

Warner,2019-03-30 INTRODUCTIONCBD Cannabidiol is a compound found in the Cannabis plant It can be used in several different ways including vaping tinctures capsules and edibles Unlike its close relative THC Tetrahydrocannabinol CBD is completely non psychoactive This allows us to benefit from the many health properties of the Cannabis plant without the negative side effects of getting high Because of this CBD became a very popular option for those seeking a natural alternative to treat conditions such as chronic pain multiple sclerosis PTSD epilepsy and other mental disorders At first many were skeptical thinking that a natural compound let alone a Cannabis compound could effectively treat such a wide range of conditions But as medical researchers learned more and the stories from tens of thousands of people began to stack up the truth was undeniable CBD works For starters CBD inherits many of the medicinal properties of Cannabis such as being anti inflammatory and anti anxiolytic This allows it to provide natural stress anxiety and pain relief But this alone is not what allows CBD to benefit so many conditions What allows it to effectively treat so many conditions and maintain health and wellness in the body is how the cannabinoids found in CBD interact with receptors throughout our body In 1988 the first cannabinoid receptor was discovered in the brain of a rat Researchers found that these receptors reacted specifically to THC and were found primarily found in regions of the brain responsible for mental and physiological processes such as memory high cognition emotion and motor coordination Two years later in 1993 the second cannabinoid receptor was found as part of the immune and central nervous systems It was then that researchers started to realize that they may have been onto something but these receptors were only found in rodents so what is the big deal right Fast forward to 1995 researchers discovered that these receptors now officially referred to as the CB1 receptor and CB2 receptor were found not only in rats but within thousands of other species including humans Thanks to advancements in technology and knowledge and tons of clinical trials researchers were able to reverse engineer what they discovered trace back through the metabolic pathways of various cannabinoids and uncover an entirely unknown signaling system between the CB1 and CB2 receptors in our bodies and receptors found in Cannabis compounds which they called endocannabinoids. Due to the role of endocannabinoids in this system, the system was officially named the Endocannabinoid System (ECS). As researchers learned more about the ECS, they discovered that it was a vital component in maintaining the body's homeostasis, which is the ideal balance between interdependent elements in the body. To give you an idea on how the ECS helps maintain homeostasis, let me give you an example. When we become stressed, our mind releases cortisol, which is the compound responsible for how we feel when we are stressed. Cortisol can be helpful when we need to react quickly to a dangerous situation; however, too much disrupts the natural balance of our body and mind, which can result in serious health problems. When certain endocannabinoids are introduced into the body, it not only helps provide stress relief, it helps manage our perception of stress so that we can look at the situation with a clear mind and make the best decision. With all the scientific jargon, this last section may have been a little confusing. So just to clarify, scientists discovered that there are systems in our bodies that are solely dependent on their interaction with cannabinoids, and these systems are part of vital functions in our bodies. Basically, our bodies were designed to work with cannabinoids, and they can even be considered as essential to our overall health and wellness.
