then portioning it up to reuse and store meals for later. If you've ever kept up with your leftovers from dinner to take with you for lunch the next day, you've learned that meal prepping refers to preparing 3-7 days worth of food at a time. This kind of time management is great for lunches for the week, but instead of keeping up with lunch, you can use this same technique for breakfast, lunch, dinner, and snacks. Meal prepping involves preparing food in advance to reduce waste and reduce time spent cooking. Whether you plan a day or a budget, when you're not rushed, you have more time to focus on convenience and preparing more than just meals. With meal prepping, you get to eat the same thing for a few days in a row, so if you don't like leftovers or get bored with the same meal prepped for you, if having a meal plan that maximizes your time and budget is more your style, then something different every night is not for you. Generally, one meal per day for the individual, or maybe one other person, is a whole meal. Meal prep is a whole meal, and it would be quite difficult to share it with others. If you're a meal prep enthusiast, you'll be happy to know that there are many meal prep plans available online, such as My Meal Prep Recipe Planner by Thriving Life Co. (2019-12-13).
