Listening to the Land Lee Schweninger, 2010-01-25 For better or worse representations abound of Native Americans as a people with an innate and special connection to the earth This study looks at the challenges faced by Native American writers who confront stereotypical representations as they assert their own ethical relationship with the earth Lee Schweninger considers a range of genres memoirs novels stories essays by Native writers from various parts of the United States Contextualizing these works within the origins evolution and perpetuation of the green labels imposed on American Indians Schweninger shows how writers often find themselves denying some land ethic stereotypes while seeming to embrace others Taken together the time periods covered in Listening to the Land span more than a hundred years from Luther Standing Bear's description of his late nineteenth century life on the prairie to Linda Hogan's account of a 1999 Makah hunt of a gray whale Two thirds of the writers Schweninger considers however are well known voices from the second half of the twentieth century including N Scott Momaday Louise Erdrich Vine Deloria Jr Gerald Vizenor and Louis Owens Few ecocritical studies have focused on indigenous environmental attitudes in comparison to related work done by historians and anthropologists Listening to the Land will narrow this gap in the scholarship moreover it will add individual Native American perspectives to an understanding of what to these writers is a genuine Native American philosophy regarding the land
