One Health: The Well-being Impacts of Human-nature Relationships

Eric Brymer, Elizabeth Louise Freeman, Miles Richardson, 2019-11-07 In recent years there has been a growing body of evidence from fields such as public health architecture ecology landscape forestry psychology sport science psychiatry geography suggesting that nature enhances psychological health and wellbeing Physical activity in the presence of nature feelings of connection to nature engagement with nature specific environmental features e g therapeutic water and trees and images of real and virtual nature have all been posited as important wellbeing facilitators Thus the association between natural environments and health outcomes might be more complex than initially understood Pritchard Richardson Sheffield Karmanov Freeman Akhurst 2015 in the development of wellbeing and health outcomes Furthermore traditional theoretical notions such as Biophilia topophilia restoration theories and stress reduction theories typically used to interpret findings are also being critiqued Often one of the main barriers for practitioners is the vast array of theories that claim to effectively explain research findings but that tend to be only partially relevant e g for Physical activity or restoration focus on the characteristics of the person e g nature relatedness and only some features of the landscape e g therapeutic landscapes This special edition therefore brings together cutting edge ideas and research from a wide set of disciplines with the purpose of exploring interdisciplinary or trans disciplinary approaches to understanding the psychological health and wellbeing benefits of human nature interactions

Forests for human health and well-being

Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2020-11-16 Forests provide directly or indirectly important health benefits for all people not only those whose lives are closely intertwined with forest ecosystems but also people far from forests including urban populations Recognition of the importance of forests for food security and nutrition has significantly increased in recent years but their role in human health has received less attention Nutrition and health are intrinsically connected Good nutrition cannot be achieved without good health and vice versa Therefore when addressing linkages with forests it is essential to address health and nutrition at the same time Yet forests also provide a wide range of benefits to human health and well being beyond those generally associated with food security and nutrition This publication examines the many linkages of forests and human health and offers recommendations for creating an enabling environment in which people can benefit from them Designed for practitioners and policy makers in a range of fields from forestry to food security from nutrition and health to land use and urban planning it is hoped that the paper will stimulate interest in expanding cross sectoral collaboration to a new set of stakeholders to unlock the full potential of forests contributions to greater human well being Enhancing Food

Production System Resilience for Food Security Facing a Changing Environment Liming Ye,Ping Zhu,2023-11-28 As the dominant source of the human food supply the global land system underlies the foundation of the livelihood and wellbeing of humanity on Earth On the one hand the growth rate in the land system s productive capacity of food has played a key role in global food provision Technological breakthroughs in wheat and rice production during the past few decades for instance have greatly contributed to the maintenance of this growth rate in many parts of the world On the other hand however the terrestrial food production system is facing increasing challenges from environmental stressors ranging from climate change air pollution to land degradation Whether and how the global land system will support the food security of more than 10 billion people in the 21st century while minimizing its environmental footprint remains an open question to debate It is inevitable that the global food production system has to be shifted from focusing on production expansion to land system resilience so that the dual goals of sustainable production and environmental friendliness can be simultaneously achieved Ecosystems and Human Well-being Millennium Ecosystem Assessment,2005 Millennium Ecosystem Assessment poverty Local, Traditional and Indigenous Food Systems in the 21st Century to Combat Obesity, Undernutrition and Climate Change, 2nd edition Rebecca Kanter,Sofia Boza,Gina Kennedy,2023-07-31 Traditional and indigenous food systems have existed for centuries and were in balance with local food supplies globally However between the mid 20th and early 21st century the green revolution dramatically altered food production which in turn affected the inclusivity of traditional production systems within food systems and subsequently traditional dietary intakes This change was accompanied by lifestyle changes and spurred a global nutrition transition Today the world faces a global syndemic of obesity undernutrition and climate change A new call to action to create food systems that nourish people and sustain the planet is needed Traditional and indigenous food systems have long been recognized as systems that can both support good human nutrition as well as maintain a balance with nature There is an underutilized knowledge base around traditional and indigenous food systems This includes the knowledge of nutritious species traditional culinary preparations and cultural practices Greater agricultural production of underutilized species can result in more sustainable agricultural and food systems which can also help improve livelihoods and food security Traditional and indigenous cultural practices with respect to both land and water management as well as culinary practices contribute to both sustainable food production and consumption These practices require a greater evidence base in order to be incorporated into public health nutrition initiatives related to improving dietary quality such as food based dietary guidelines for example An increased focus on the importance of local traditional and indigenous food systems and nutrition could therefore help countries to improve human nutrition and ideally help mitigate the global syndemic of obesity undernutrition and climate change This Research Topic will focus on documenting diverse local food systems and promoting elements within them that can help improve nutrition and health both human and planetary in various ways including the livelihood development of knowledge holders The COVID-19 Pandemic's Transformation of Human Relationships with Nature at Multiple Scales Sonya Sachdeva,Lindsay Kathleen Campbell,Erika S. Ecosystems and Human Well-Being Kanchan Ratna Chopra,2005-12-14 With the knowledge of possible outcomes what kind of actions should we take The Millennium Ecosystem

Assessment scored 74 response options for dealing with declines in ecosystem services and biodiversity and managing drivers such as climate change and nutrient loading This third volume in the MA series analyzes the track record of past policies and the potential of new ones The challenge of reversing the degradation of ecosystems while meeting increasing demands for their services can be met only with significant policy and institutional changes However a difficult set of obstacles stand in the way Policy makers must keep in mind that there are both trade offs and synergies between human well being ecosystems and ecosystem services and that decisions regarding these tradeoffs are difficult and often contentious The Responses volume ultimately establishes which policy options have the greatest chance to overcome the obstacles and generate positive outcomes It will serve as an invaluable guide to the creation of stronger policy frameworks for the future
