

Why did Rachelle die?

Distraught family's desperate search for answers

By CYDNEE MARDON

When 21-year-old Rachelle Childs didn't return to her Bargo home last Friday night, her parents didn't know anything was terribly wrong.

Just hours later, Rachelle's parents rushed home from holidays and started distributing missing person posters.

By Sunday afternoon, the close-knit family was given the most crushing news.

Their beloved Rachelle, a bubbly blonde who lit up any room, was dead - her body found dumped at Gerra.

Graham and Anne Childs know it's a shock, but their daughter's disappearance truly was out of character.

She wasn't the type of woman to miss appointments and certainly not the type to go home from a pub with someone she had only just met.

Her movements in the hours after she arrived at Bargo Road on Thursday night hold the key to her terrible fate.

Rachelle, a car enthusiast and animal lover, was seen at the hotel at Tyne and not again until a security guard stopped to get out a small dog on Gerra Rd at 2.30am on Friday and found her body.

Rachelle's beloved 1978 blue Holden Commodore sedan, registration QV 2000, was found locked up at the pub but her keys, mobile phone and handbag were missing.

Kirsty was surprised to pick her for

Graham, Anne and Kirsty Childs who are appealing for information from the public about Rachelle's last hours.
