

How to Explain Family Science to Anyone

Create Your Family Science Elevator Pitch

When someone asks you "What is Family Science?" how can you answer effectively? Use our elevator pitch — the steps of progressively introducing a concept during a short elevator ride.

Follow These Steps:

Definition 1: Give a basic description of Family Science. One definition is good to share. Some interesting facts or a surprising example helps.

Definition 2: In 1-2 sentences, expand on how Family Science connects concepts and important

Definition 3: Give a real-life example of how Family Science understanding would be helpful in practice. Give your words to something your audience cares about.

Definition 4: Address how others might experience your work. Give an example (connect with your audience's identity, knowledge about other topics or a relevant event).

Definition 5: Offer one interesting piece of good advice using Family Science wisdom. You could mention why it's important to think specifically on Family.

What Can I Say? Define it. Illustrate it.

If you have 30 seconds or less, focus on steps 1 and 2. Give a clear description and real-world example.

Keep one fun example.

It's funny for your own pitch, it's help to give your more info.

Family Science is...
the scientific study of families.
It's how we connect relationships.

Your Elevator Pitch Should Be...

- Easy to understand
- Memorable — use positive or negative emotion
- Concise
- Interesting to someone
- Engaged people
- Personal to you

Tips for a Successful Pitch

- Take 10-15 seconds. You can share as much as you want.
- Your words should be easy to hear and illustrate Family Science concepts in practice.
- Adapt to fit your relationship. If you're in a work you can use a more development-oriented tone. Your family science knowledge.
- Don't worry about a perfect three words — you can talk in detail.
- Remember that you're a person, speaking right.
