Decision Making

High schoolers consider many different things when making decisions. For most, their experiences in school and with their parents and teachers in their home affect their choices, and they usually follow their own paths as well. These are all very important factors in decision making. However, there are other factors that can affect their choices. These are things like money, peer pressure, and personal interests. These factors can all affect a person's decision making. This is why it's important to understand these factors. <https://www.education.com/article/teaching-strategies/teaching-strategies-for-high-schoolers/>

There are many different ways to make decisions. One way is to follow a checklist, like the one below. This checklist is a good way to make sure you have considered all the important factors. Another way is to use a decision matrix, like the one below. This matrix helps you to weigh different factors against each other. This is a good way to make sure you have considered all the important factors.

Decision Matrix

One way to use a decision matrix is to list all the factors you want to consider. Then, for each factor, list the pros and cons. Finally, add up the pros and cons for each factor. This will help you to see which factor is the most important.

Decision Matrix Examples

For example, if you're trying to decide whether to buy a car or not, you might want to consider the following factors:

- Cost of car: the cost of the car, including the cost of fuel and insurance. This factor is the most important for most people.
- Car type: the type of car you want to buy, including the cost of maintenance and insurance.
- Maintenance: the cost of maintenance and insurance for the car.
