National Forest Inventories Pathways For Common Reporting:

National Forest Inventories Erkki Tomppo, Thomas Gschwantner, Mark Lawrence, Ronald E. McRoberts, 2009-12-02 Forest inventories throughout the world have evolved gradually over time The content as well as the concepts and definitions employed are constantly adapted to the users needs Advanced inventory systems have been established in many countries within Europe as well as outside Europe as a result of development work spanning several decades in some cases more than 100 years With continuously increasing international agreements and commitments the need for information has also grown drastically and reporting requests have become more frequent and the content of the reports wider Some of the agreements made at the international level have direct impacts on national economies and international decisions e g the Kyoto Protocol Thus it is of utmost importance that the forest information supplied is collected and analysed using sound scientific principles and that the information from different countries is comparable European National Forest Inventory NFI teams gathered in Vienna in 2003 to discuss the new challenges and the measures needed to get data users to take full advantage of existing NFIs As a result the European National Forest Inventory Network ENFIN a network of NFIs was established The ENFIN members decided to apply for funding for meetings and collaborative activities COST European Cooperation in Science and Technology provided the necessary financial means for the realization of the program

National Forest Inventories Claude Vidal, Iciar A. Alberdi, Laura Hernández Mateo, John J. Redmond, 2016-11-24 The book presents the current state and good practices of national forest inventories in monitoring wood resources and demonstrates pathways for harmonisation and improved common reporting Beyond a general overview over availability and use of wood resources in different countries it provides a unique collection of original contributions from national forest inventory experts with in depth descriptions of current NFI methods in assessing wood availability and wood use in European countries and selected countries from America and Asia The main topics are national definitions and improvements in common reporting of forests available for wood supply stem quality and assortments estimation of change including growth and drain and tree resources outside forest land The book is a must have for everyone who is contributing to national forest inventories either methodologically or operatively for people who want or need to understand national forest inventory provided data and information on the availability of wood resources By providing profound knowledge it is a valuable basis for scientists involved in scenario modelling and analysing effects of climate change as well as individuals in private organisations and public administrations promoting the sustainable use of natural resources and the potential of green economy

National Forest Inventories: Contributions to Forest Biodiversity Assessments Gherardo Chirici, Susanne Winter, Ronald E. McRoberts, 2011-01-04 Forest biodiversity is crucial to the ecological economic and social well being of earth's civilisations Unfortunately however forest biodiversity is threatened to a serious degree in nearly all countries Therefore many countries have agreed to be parties to international agreements focused on maintaining restoring and monitoring biodiversity further these countries have agreed to report to international bodies on forest biodiversity status and trends NFIs are the primary source of large scale information available for this purpose but the large variety of definitions protocols sampling designs and plot configurations used by NFIs makes comparable international reporting extremely difficult This book presents the results of Working Group 3 of COST Action E43 in the development of harmonization techniques for common reporting of estimates of forest biodiversity indicators using NFI data Harmonization tests were carried out on a large common data base containing raw NFI data from 13 European countries and the USA With its collection of practical examples for the estimation of forest biodiversity indicators it s a practical tool for anyone involved in forest inventories and in forest resource monitoring and management as well as for those involved in biodiversity assessment and reporting National Forest Inventories of Latin America and the Caribbean Ramírez, C., Alberdi, I., Bahamondez, C., Freitas, J.,2022-06-24 National forest inventories NFIs are one of the main sources of forest information This book describes the importance and history of NFIs in Latin America and the Caribbean a region that is particularly relevant due to the extension and biodiversity of its forests Methodologies for data collection and measurement of the most relevant indicators in 21 countries are addressed In addition similarities and differences in IFN designs challenges and opportunities and prospects for the future are examined This analysis demonstrates that the information generated by the countries is diverse and must be harmonized to meet the commitments and opportunities for sustainable forest management in the 21st century This publication represents a milestone in the beginning of the harmonization process towards data transparency within the forestry sector in Latin America and the Caribbean and constitutes the first collaborative effort of a network of NFI experts and collaborators in the region Statistical Methods and Applications in Forestry and Environmental Sciences Girish Chandra,Raman Nautiyal,Hukum Chandra,2020-01-04 This book presents recent developments in statistical methodologies with particular relevance to applications in forestry and environmental sciences It discusses important methodologies like ranked set sampling adaptive cluster sampling small area estimation calibration approach based estimators design of experiments multivariate techniques Internet of Things and ridge regression methods It also covers the history of the implementation of statistical techniques in Indian forestry and the National Forest Inventory of India The book is a valuable resource for applied statisticians students researchers and practitioners in the forestry and environment sector It includes real world examples and case studies to help readers apply the techniques discussed It also motivates academicians and researchers to use new technologies in the areas of forestry and environmental sciences with the help of software like R MATLAB Statistica and Mathematica National Forest Inventories Erkki Tomppo,Thomas Gschwantner,Mark Lawrence,2010 Traditionally the purpose of National Forest Inventories NFIs has been to provide continuously updated information regarding the state of a given nation s forest resources including their timber volumes species composition and sustainable development But with increased international reporting requirements to the FAO the ITTO the UN s Framework Convention on Climate Change the Ministerial Conference Protecting Forest in Europe and other international bodies the potential role of how NFIs can accurately respond to these requirements has received some considerable attention Addressing the issue of how well countries are able to respond to current international reporting requirements this book discusses the importance of comparable reporting and the possible approaches for achieving comparability across Europe and globally It includes country status reports from 37 countries worldwide and it discusses methodologies and techniques for a common reporting system With its collection of inventories and detailed discussions on the current status and future needs of NFIs this book provides an invaluable resource for anyone involved in developing managing monitoring or contributing to forest inventories as well as to those who are researching or practising forest resource management Remote Sensing of Natural Resources Guangxing Wang,Qihao Weng,2013-07-12
