with an initial working capital of $200,000, the history of a changed ownership, and the fact that the company had no other assets. The initial plan was to carry the company's first year of operations at the company's expense, but the board members, in violation of the partnership agreement, decided to carry the first year of the company's expenses and to carry the second year of the company's expenses. The partnership agreement provided that the company's expenses for the first year of the company's operations be carried by the partnership, and the partnership agreement provided that the company's expenses for the second year of the company's operations be carried by the partnership. The partnership agreement provided that the company's expenses for the first year of the company's operations be carried by the partnership, and the partnership agreement provided that the company's expenses for the second year of the company's operations be carried by the partnership.
